CZAR SHIES BOMB IN DOUMA'S MIDST

Grave Possibilities in Refusal to Receive Deputation with Reply to Speech from Throne.

RADICALS IN WAR MOOD.

Urgent Sitting of Deputies Is Called to Consider Ways and Means in Impending Crisis.

BULLETIN.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, May 21, 3 a. m.—THE TRIBUNE'S St. Petersburg correspondent claims he has obtained information of a plot that has been elaborated at large meetings of military officers to surround the Tauride palace, arrest all the members of the parliament, and proclaim Gen. Trepoff military dictator in the event of Emperor Nicholas failing to abolish the parliament. The conspirators then will deal with the czar, in whose name they would claim they had been acting.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 20.—A bomb was thrown into the parliamentary camp this afternoon by a note received by President Mouromtseff of the lower house from Peterhof, which, instead of making an appointment for an audience at which he and the deputation could present the address in reply to the speech from the throne, contained the information that Emperor Nicholas would not receive the deputation and that the address must be presented through the ministry of the court.

Disconcerted utterly at this unexpected development, the leaders of the majority in the house hastily summoned a caucus of the constitutional democratic deputies. President Mouromtseff, instead of sending the address to Baron Fredericks, minister of the imperial house, immediately issued a call for a meeting of parliament at 11 o'clock tomorrow, at which he will report the occurrence and ask for further instructions. A most heated meeting is in prospect.

Puts Deputies in Rage.

The first disposition of the caucus of constitutional democrats, which was in session all the afternoon and evening and at midnight had not been concluded, was to regard the refusal to receive the deputation as a challenge and an open affront, which was only answerable by a counter declaration of war.

The deputies were red with rage, but after the first passion had cooled the leaders realized the danger of too precipitate action and set for themselves the task of bringing their enraged followers under control.

Outsiders were not admitted to the caucus, but through the glass doors of the great hall of the Constitutional club, where the session was held, it could be seen that Prof. Milukoff, Prince Peter Dolgoroukoff, and others were on their feet time and again pleading with and commanding their auditors to act deliberately and firmly, and not ruin all by unreasoning passion.

Radicals May Force Crisis.

The cooler councils seemed ultimately to be prevailing, but it is almost certain that the radical group, accompanied by a portion of the peasants, will break away tomorrow and endeavor to force the house into some . ery declaration against the emperor and the government which might compel an immediate rupture, entail dissolution, and civil war.

An interesting constitutional point is involved in the refusal of a personal audience by the emperor. According to the parliamentary law "the president submits to the consideration of the emperor the transactions of the lower house," but it is not stated whether he does so personally, and a deputation is nowhere authorized.

A member of the ministry stated today that Emperor Nicholas was willing to receive President Mouromtseff, but that the action of the house in appointing a delegation to accompany him was regarded as a dangerous precedent, capable of being stretched to include a deputation of any size—even the whole of the membership of the house.

The minister intimated that if the leaders of the house desired to avoid a rupture they could do so either by accepting the instructions to present the address through the ministry of the court as a proper and justifiable matter of routine, or could, by keeping within the limits of the constitutional provision, direct the president of the house to apply alone for an audience. It was pointed out that no distinction had been made between the lower house and the council of the empire and that the last named body also has been instructed to present its address through the same channel.

President Mouromtseff again went to Peterhof this evening, in order to be presented to the empress, who had no opportunity of meeting him during the ceremonies there Saturday. He did not see the emperor.

Absorbing Interest in Douma.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ST. PETERSBURG, May 20.—Information was received here today from Moscow and Kieff describing how the extra editions of the evening newspapers giving full reports of the douma's proceedings were struggled for and read by intensely interested groups on the streets. This immediate access to the people throughout the country has given the douma enormous advantage in the war against the government.

Even if comprehensive amnesty is granted it is obvious the douma will maintain aggressive hostility toward the government. A great majority of the members adopt the attitude of Revolutionary Leader Aladagin, who declared the time limit for the czar, his ministers, and the provincial governors long ago expired and that promises from them have no value. They treat count de Witte's advances on the same ground with silent contempt. It is the consensus of opinion in the douma that count de Witte is morally a coward who advocates reforms only when other people have to execute them.

May Dissolve Parliament.

LONDON, May 21.—The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent declares that the days of the Russian parliament are numbered. He says:

"In the eyes of the court party the parliament is already dead, the only question not solved being how and when to arrange a decent burial. My belief is that the crown will dissolve the parliament, promulgate a narrow electoral law, and order new elections, which will result in the return of its own partisans."

COAL LINES CURB WILL BE DRASTIC

Report of Interstate Commission Will Urge Congress to Make Sweeping Reforms.

FORBIDDEN TO OWN MINES

Neither Roads Nor Officials Will Be Allowed to Hold Stock in the Mining Companies.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 20.—[Special.]—The revelations of favoritism and "graft" in the relations between the railroads and the coal companies made to the interstate commerce commission will lead, it is reliably reported, to a sensational report to congress embodying the following recommendations:

The government supervision of the anthracite coal trade.

Drastic national legislation providing penalties, forbidding not only the direct or indirect ownership of coal mines by railroad companies but the direct or indirect ownership by officers of railroad companies.

A direct report that the coal carrying railroads have violated the interstate commerce regulations in the distribution of cars.

A statement that many roads, in handling Standard Oil commerce, have violated the provisions of the Sherman law.

No report regarding individual prosecutions.

Further Probe Is Useless.

If the investigations of the interstate commerce commission were to stop today the recommendations of that body to congress would be about as above set forth, and from information still in hand the members of the commission believe that their further probing into the anthracite and bituminous coal situation and the Standard Oil trade will only result in supplying further foundation for such a report.

No draft of any report to congress has yet been made, but the commissioners and counsel have the subject constantly in mind, and are even willing to discuss the subject unofficially. While unwilling to be quoted upon the subject, the trend of their sentiment, as the hearings continue, is unmistakable.

May Prosecute Violators.

The announcement that they will not report in favor of prosecutions of any officers of the railroads investigated certainly does not mean that there will be no such prosecutions. The commission, however, does not expect at this time to make any statement to congress upon this subject, but to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the counsel appointed by the attorney general to consider such violations of the Sherman interstate law as may be brought out by the testimony. The counsel having this part of the investigation in charge will give no hint as to their probable course.

Bituminous Coal Roads Next.

The last of the commissioners has now left Philadelphia, although two of them will return on Tuesday night to take up the investigation of the bituminous coal roads. The others will continue the Standard Oil probe in Cleveland. After these hearings are completed the anthracite roads again will become the final object of attention on the part of the commission.

William A. Glasgow Jr., counsel for the commission, said yesterday that he would not hazard a guess as to when the hearings would be completed. "They certainly will continue," he said, "until the railroads have had every opportunity to explain, if any such a thing is possible, the astonishing evidence of graft that already has been made public.

The commission will insist upon explanations, if they can be made, so that its final report to congress will be based not only on the reports but the railroad companies' explanations of them.

In the forecast of the commission's report, based upon many conversations, it will be noted that almost revolutionary action is suggested regarding the anthracite coal mines and coal carrying railroads. The commissioners believe that the anthracite region, with its limited area and practical monopoly, gives opportunity for easy government control.

Gains Valuable Aid.

The voluminous report in the first investigation is now in the hands of the commissioners and a wealth of new evidence has come to them upon which to base their final questioning of the railroad and coal company officials.

The commissioners believe that the comparatively small area of the anthracite fields affords such an opportunity for monopoly that the rights of the people should be considered. The vast extent of the bituminous fields and their scattered location throughout the country does not cause the commissioners to fear any dangerous monopoly in this line of the coal trade, providing strong enough action is taken by congress to prevent the railroads from combining and controlling the industry, so no suggestion of government control of bituminous mines will be made, but absolute freedom of the coal companies from railroad holdups and favoritism will be insisted upon as vitally necessary.

Differ as to Recommendations.

There is some difference of opinion among the commissioners as to how far their recommendations should go for legislation to prevent the officers in the railroad companies from holding coal stock. It is even regarded as possible that there may be two reports upon this subject, but most of the commissioners have become convinced that the most drastic legislation possible under the constitution should be favored.

ANOTHER GUESS FOR PRESIDENT OF U. OF C.

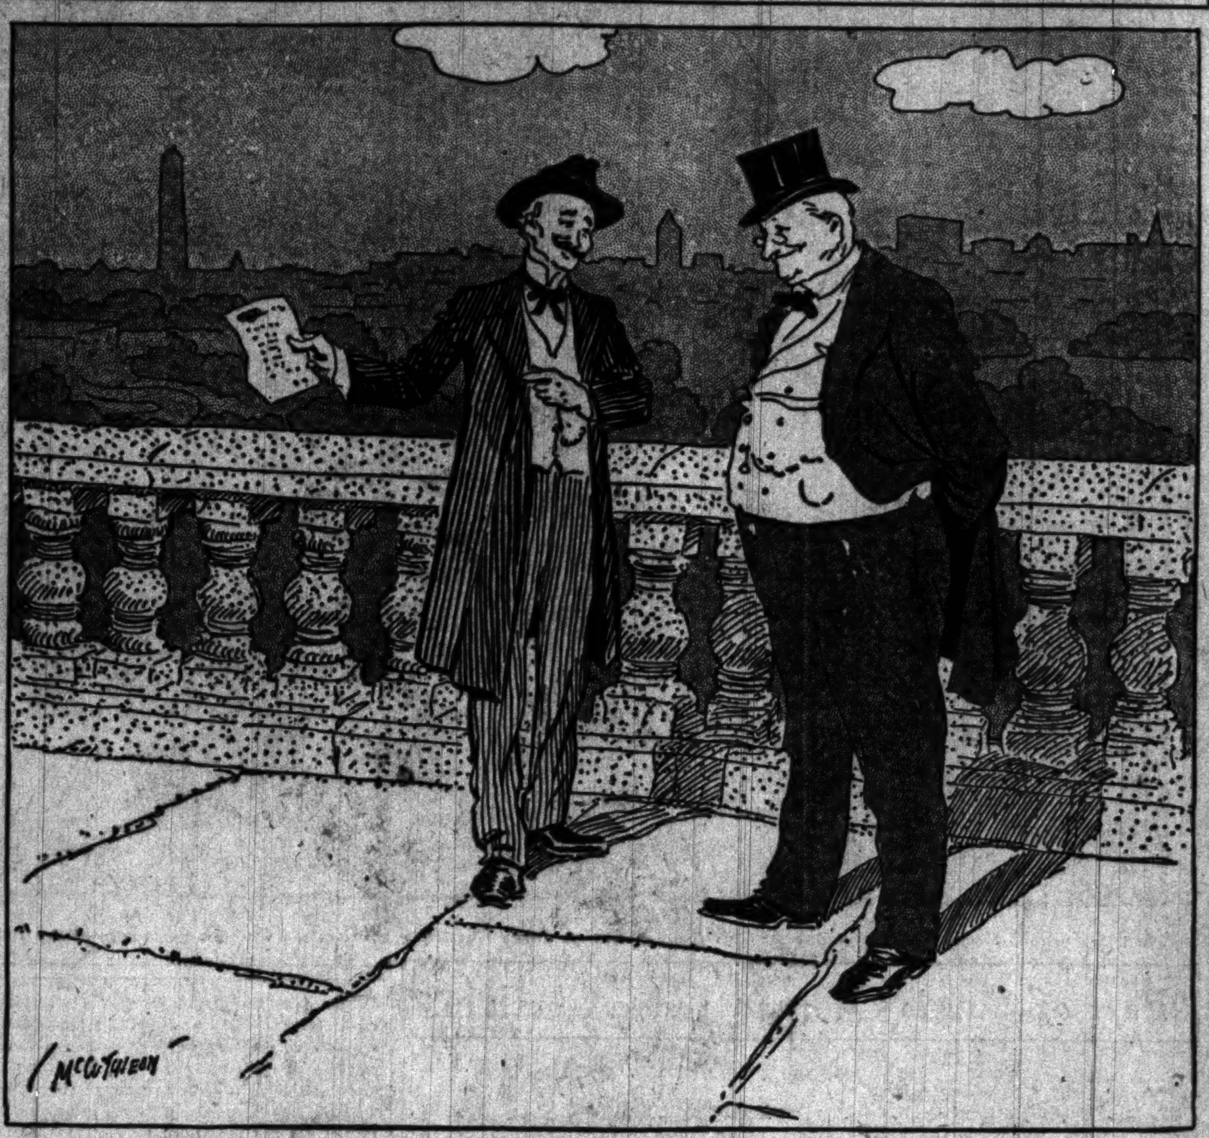
Andrew D. White on Way to Chicago, Followed by Rumor of a Presidency for the University.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 20.—[Special.]—Andrew D. White, former president of Cornell university, and former United States ambassador to St. Petersburg and Berlin, was in Pittsburg today en route to Chicago.

A report was current that Mr. White's trip to Chicago is being made at the request of the trustees of the University of Chicago and that he may be asked to accept the presidency of that institution. Mr. White, when asked about the rumor, replied:

"It is a matter which I cannot discuss."

THE DIARY OF CONGRESSMAN PUMPHREY—NO. 15.



Washington, May 20.—Well, we brought Mr. Editor Steele to time. He's been begging like a whipped dog. As soon as he found that the cards were stacked against him he saw the fine Italian hand of E. J. Pumphrey, and he began to back pedal. The first evidence was a two column portrait of myself which he printed in his paper. It appeared on the first page under the caption: "Prominent Men in the Nation's Capital—Hon. E. J. Pumphrey." A week later he reprinted my old speech on "The Flag," stating that it was reprinted at the request of a number of his readers. He called it a gem of American oratory. I'm beginning to feel that, at heart, Steele is not such a bad fellow after all. A day or two later he printed an editorial that was a complete capitulation. It ran something like this: "While we have felt impelled on one or two occasions to differ from the judgment of Mr. Pumphrey, we wish to be absolutely fair to that distinguished statesman. He has, perhaps, done things which we have felt inclined to criticise. But, as the poet says, 'to err is human; to forgive, divine,' and we forgive him, although we don't lay claim to divinity on that score. We also have erred, thereby proving ourselves to be human; and when we err we try to be big enough to acknowledge it. Mr. Pumphrey's record in congress has been a brilliant one," etc., etc., and so on. It was a complete change of front.

After this gradual, but none the less certain, switch had been in operation in several issues, Steele wrote me in a most chastened spirit. "My dear congressman," he wrote, "if anybody says I am a fool, he exaggerates. I can see which side my bread is buttered on, and my eyesight is not overly good at that. You've got me licked, Mr. Congressman. Now what do you say to a compromise? I want that printing contract, and if I don't get it I'll be up against it good and plenty. I want to come into the reservation. I'll be a quiet Indian, if not a good one, and you need not fear any further hostility in the columns of my paper. But I must have that printing contract. What do you say? Yours very truly, EDWARD STEELE."

I showed this letter to Senator Octopus, and he smiled benevolently. "He's a sensible man. Write and tell him that he shall get his contract, and say you hope he will always be your friend. Don't say anything about bringing him to time. There's no good in rubbing it in on a man when your object is accomplished. Write a real nice, friendly letter."

"I'll do it, senator," said I, and I felt my voice tremble; "and I want to thank you—with all my heart. You've certainly been a good friend to me, and I hope I can some time show my gratitude by doing you a service." "Don't mention it, Pumphrey. Come and let's get a drink."

MINISTER FIEND OR FEEBLE?

Pastor Firebug, Ex-Illinois Convict, Says He Is Jekyll-Hyde.

ACCUSES SELF OF CRIME.

Graduate of Edinburgh University Is Mystery to Waterloo, N. Y., Police.

Waterloo, N. Y., May 20.—[Special.]—In the person of the Rev. C. Stuart Bain, confessed pyromaniac, allenists have a subject after their own heart. It is for them to decide whether, as he suggests himself, his has been a genuine Jekyll and Hyde existence, whether his crimes are due to autohypnosis, self-imposed hypnotism, or whether his is a case of habitual criminality.

Bain is in jail here charged with setting fire to the First Baptist church, of which he was pastor. He admits he did it. He wrote anonymous letters to the police directing suspicion to himself.

Bain is a Scotchman by birth and a graduate of Edinburgh university. He is an ex-convict as well as a preacher and ex-preacher. He is 45 years old and is known to have had five charges in the west in the Presbyterian denomination, a mission at Newburg, as well as the Baptist church here. His record, as it has been compiled by District Attorney Bodine, is:

In 1889, pastor of a church in Princeton, Ill.; 1890, pastor, Garden Place, Ill.; 1891, pastor Harvard, Ill.; 1892, pastor, Garnett, Kas.; 1893, pastor, Converse [formerly Xenia], Ind.; 1904, he was suspended from the Presbyterian ministry.

In 1896 he was sent to Joliet prison for embezzlement, and was released in 1899.

Wanders Over Country as Cook.

In his Kansas Presbyterian charge three incendiary fires marked the pastorate. He was deposed from the Presbyterian ministry for improper conduct in money matters. He has wandered about the country picking up odd jogs here and there, chiefly as a cook in hotels. He has been something of what might be called a criminal tramp. He floated into New York City and in the Baptist mission was converted over again and through Dr Simpson's Christian Alliance school in Nyack he drifted again into the ministry, and now has landed in jail as a pyromaniac.

Bain says when he is good he remembers everything; that when he is bad—which seems to have been largely his normal condition—he remembers nothing. He declares he is a victim of "spells" when memory and consciousness of right leave him utterly, when depraved instincts take possession of him.

Constant Temptation to Lie.

He admits he has a constant temptation to lie and he has lied until he has been found out with disastrous results. He recalls much and a lot of little things, which makes his assertion he has complete loss of memory for his evil deeds seem inconsistent to the authorities, but he does not recall any pyromaniac tendencies. The authorities are inclined to think they are dealing simply with a depraved man and that his suggestion of double identity with complications of morbid psychology is simply the invention of a crafty imposter.

Some of the congregation here did not like him. There was something about him that made them a little suspicious, a suggestion of temperament that made them all hold aloof.

From time to time Bain tried to borrow money from members of the congregation on notes. He did not succeed and whispers began to be circulated about him among certain members of the flock. His salary was $800 a year with free rent of parsonage. He had not been here long before he shocked some of the church members by taking a saloonkeeper and his family into the parsonage. When his attention was called to the fact, he replied:

"What's that? I used to tend bar myself."

On the night of March 6 Bain spent the early evening with Lee Park, an officer of the church, in the church study. At 7:30 o'clock they went over to the Presbyterian church to listen to a cartoonist give a lecture. The cartoonist made a picture of burning Rome.

As the two men passed out of the study to go to the entertainment Bain looked into the stove and said he guessed there was coal enough to keep the fire going for a time. The coal scuttle was empty.

Picture Gives Idea of Fire.

After the lecture Mr. Park went his way and Bain started for the parsonage, which adjoins the church. Fifteen minutes later the church was on fire and burning fiercely. Bain was in his room in the parsonage with coat and collar removed. A man had seen him come out of the church a few minutes before.

Next Sunday at services Bain threw up his hands in the pulpit, shouting: "O, my head." Dr. Bellows was called and found the preacher with a subnormal temperature. His pulse scarcely could be felt. Bellows says the man really was ill. He was in bed three days. Then he asked leave of two weeks to go to Newburg to see a young woman, whom he was engaged to marry.

Proves His Own Accuser.

Bain came back to town Saturday night May 5. Bodine accused him of setting fire to the church. Bain denied it. Then Bodine sprung a surprise on him. Two of the anonymous letters written on the fly leaves torn from books were shown. Bodine produced the books from Bain's own library from which they were torn. The letters fitted the torn books perfectly. They were to the effect that Bain was a firebug and should be driven out of town.

Confronted with this proof, Bain admitted his guilt and said:

"I must have burned the church and written those letters, but I have no recollection of it at all. It must have been done in one of my unconscious spells."

Then he told of his double identity, and said he must have been insane at the time and pleaded to be sent to an asylum instead of prison.

Mind Like Lunar Eclipse.

Bain today issued this statement from his cell:

"It is difficult in my case to give an explanation, because my lapses include suspension of memory and the spell, when fully developed, is a blank to me afterward. It may be compared, however, to a lunar eclipse, there being a penumbra, as well as an umbra; and of the former I can give some account. While I have some recollection of this inceptive period in the lapse, I do not at the time have a clear enough apprehension of what is the cause to take precautionary measures, if such are possible.

"It is as though I entered a room with light and all the objects bright and clear. Then a veil slowly gathers before my eyes, the light dims, the objects become ill defined, and the atmosphere misty. Then the veil drops black before me and I lose myself entirely as if in deep sleep. Next I know I am in my normal state again.

"The whole effect is like a curtain in a theater descending at the climax of an act. If I committed the act of which I am accused I did it during a lapse of memory and mental power to which I am subject."

"I have no recollection of what did occur on the night of the fire. I saw a heap of shavings (a slip showing that he does remember some things), threw a match into them, and saw it blaze up. Then I rushed out, all under impulse. I could not have any possible motive in burning the church. It was a sort of Jekyll and Hyde proceeding."

DROWN IN A PARK LAGOON.

Two Men Lose Lives, Making Four Fatalities Since Wednesday.

BOAT UPSETS AND THEY SINK.

Three Others in Craft Survive, One Being Saved by a Policeman.

An attempt of occupants of a rowboat in the lagoon at Sherman park to change their places cost the lives of two men last night, making four deaths by drowning in neighborhood parks since Wednesday. On that day two boys lost their lives in the lagoon at Ogden park.

There were five men in the boat on the Sherman park lagoon, and two tried to exchange places. The others were laughing at their efforts to keep their balance when the boat capsized.

The Dead.

O'GARA, EDWARD, 43 years old, machinist, 5343 Aberdeen street; leaves wife and eight children.

WILSON, JAMES, 18 years old, 5223 May street; employé of a stock yards packing house.

In the boat with Wilson and O'Gara were H. Powers, 5332 Aberdeen street; Frank Kenney, 5300 Aberdeen street, and Thomas Noonan, Fifty-first and Aberdeen streets. Sherman park is one of the larger of the new city playgrounds and extends from Fifty-second to Fifty-fifth street and from Center avenue to Loomis street. The lagoon is near the Fifty-third street entrance on the Center avenue side.

Start Late in Evening.

The party engaged a boat at 9:30 o'clock in the evening and rowed to the middle of the lagoon. They had been out only a short time when it was proposed to make a change. This was undertaken merrily and with bantering, until the fatality came.

Kenney, unable to keep his hold on the boat when it upset, was sinking when Park Policeman McCaffery leaped into the lagoon. He rescued Kenney. O'Gara and Wilson already had sunk. Powers and Noonan swam out.

The electric lights in the park were turned out at about the time the party went on its fatal trip. Policemen dragged the lagoon in the dark until midnight, and recovered both bodies.

The youngest of O'Gara's children was born on Saturday. A son, summoned to the park, begged the policemen not to take his father's body home, and it was removed to an undertaker's. Mrs. O'Gara was not informed of the death of her husband.

Youth Saves Child's Life.

In presence of scores of sightseers in Lincoln park in the afternoon Walter Little, 10 years old, was rescued from drowning in the lagoon by Otto Runde, 18 years old, 119 Rice street. The boy fell from a pier into twelve feet of water.

None of the onlookers went to the rescue. Runde was rowing in a canoe and was attracted by the child's cries.

ROCKEFELLER TO CROSS OCEAN.

Continued Illness of His Brother William in France Leads to Decision to Sail on May 31.

New York, May 20.—The continued illness of his brother, William Rockefeller, in France, is said to have made John D. Rockefeller consent to a trip across the ocean. He will sail on May 31 on the Deutschland.

PLAN INQUIRY ON CHETLAIN'S CASE.

Either Grand Jury or Bar Association Committee Likely to Investigate the Judge's Actions.

UP TO STATE'S ATTORNEY.

Further Disclosures Held to Emphasize Necessity for Investigation to Explain Everything.

While further disclosures of Judge Chetlain's unfortunate financial entanglements were being made yesterday, it became reasonably certain that there will be an official investigation of the basis of the charges with which the jurist's reputation has been clouded.

Both the enemies and the friends of the judge declare that the state's attorney ought to present the charges to the grand jury so that Judge Chetlain and his former associates in business may be either indicted or exonerated of any evil intent. At the same time Attorney S. S. Gregory, in behalf of the judge, has proposed that a thorough inquiry be undertaken by the judiciary committee of the Chicago Bar association.

Whether any of the business deals in which the judge was involved will be investigated through the grand jury is a matter which State's Attorney Healy will be called upon to decide today. He was out of the city yesterday, but is expected to return this morning.

Olson Talks of the Case.

First Assistant State's Attorney Harry Olson is believed to have done some investigating during the day, but he was reticent in discussing the matter.

"I have talked with one or two people who know something of the affair," he said, "and with one or two friends of Judge Chetlain. Who they are I am not at liberty to say. I don't know whether there is anything in the reports for the state's attorney's office to investigate. That, of course, is a matter for Mr. Healy to determine. He undoubtedly will inquire into the affair tomorrow on his return."

It transpired later that the friends of Judge Chetlain with whom Mr. Olson talked were contemplating a demand on the state's attorney to subject the charges to a thorough airing. The jurist's friends declare that he owes it to himself to secure a complete exoneration before the community.

Chetlain Attends Conference.

Judge Chetlain himself was not inactive during the day in taking steps for getting out of his predicament. He left his residence in Rogers Park early in the evening, leaving word that he was to spend the evening "in conference with a party of business men" and that he would pass the night away from home. The message was left in a note to Mrs. Chetlain, who was absent when the judge departed.

Who composed the "party of business men" is not known, nor could the conference be located. A friend of the judge to whom the circumstance was mentioned said:

"It is just possible, you know, that the judge's friends are going to put up the money to get him out of his troubles and put him on his feet again. I believe the judge is as innocent as a babe of any dishonest intent, but I think he has been led into the company of business associates who are not so honest. This has probably been a good lesson to him and to others, too."

Denison Talks of Tunnel Case.

E. B. Denison said in the afternoon that it was ridiculous to suppose that Judge Chetlain could have had any knowledge of the fact that any of his notes were in the hands of persons who might be benefited by his decision in the Illinois tunnel case. Mr. Denison was reluctant to discuss the case. His attorney, Moritz Rosenthal, he said, had instructed him not to talk about it.

Mr. Denison was asked if he saw anything peculiar in the fact that former Ald. Nathan T. Brenner, who is William Loeffler's business associate, had discounted notes for Judge Chetlain a short time before William Loeffler's case was tried before Judge Chetlain.

"The notes," he said, "were held by various persons, and there is nothing strange in the fact that Brenner held them. That indicates nothing, in my opinion. It is preposterous to think that circumstances would have influenced in the slightest degree any decision that might be given by a man of Judge Chetlain's integrity."

Never Heard of Loeffler Deal.

Mr. Denison said he never had heard that negotiations had been entered by representatives of his company to interest William Loeffler to the extent of $100,000 in his company.

"As I have said before," he protested, "I am not well informed regarding the case. All I know is that Judge Chetlain is a strictly honorable man."

"But Judge Chetlain," it was suggested, "has blamed you and Mr. Curtis for all his trouble. He has said that your policy in hawking the notes about among lawyers and politicians in direct violation of his agreement with you has placed him in an embarrassing position. He claims that the notes, by his agreement with you, were not to be negotiated."

"What did Judge Chetlain expect us to do with his notes?" was the reply, intimating that the judge surely must have been aware that an effort would be made to dispose of the notes.

Mr. Denison would not discuss the organization of his company or any of the other allegations concerning him and his partner, Mr. Curtis. When he was asked whether he had ever operated under an assumed name in St. Louis, he would not answer.

Curtis Calls Statements False.

Curtis, when seen last night, denied much that Silverston had said and refused to discuss other points. He said:

"The story related by Silverston that Judge Chetlain, in my presence and while Silverston was in the room, said, 'So they are fishing for a judge. By God, that is worth $100,000 at least,' is a falsehood. No such conversation ever took place. Judge Chetlain never has discussed any case before him or that was to be tried before him in my presence. We never talked of his professional duties."

Mr. Curtis denied that he ever had interested Gov. Deneen in his financial enterprises. He admitted a deal with Frank O. Lowden and the latter's law partner, H. J. Davis, but insisted that there was nothing in it which reflected on his integrity. He denied also that he and others ever had fitted up a suite of luxurious apartments in the Majestic hotel where they relieved unwary persons of thousands of dollars in brace faro games.

"I never played faro in my life," said Mr. Curtis.

Guards Secrets of Notes.

He declined to enter into a discussion as to the manner in which he secured Judge Chetlain's notes for $14,000, and would not express any opinion on the possibility that the judge might be compromised seriously by the fact that those notes might fall into the hands of lawyers, politicians, and others who might hope to profit by decisions given in lawsuits tried before Judge Chetlain.

Curtis was asked how he came to approach Billy Loeffler with a proposition to invest $100,000 in the Rapid Transit Car company.

"He was merely one of the many men with money whom we tried to interest in the company," he replied.

"Did you send Silverston to him with Chetlain's notes?"

"No, I didn't. I sent Silverston out to get the notes discounted and he was to use his own judgment as to whom he approached."

How Silverston Sold Notes.

"Did you know what pressure Silverston brought to bear on Loeffler to take the judge's paper?"

"No, I did not. I didn't know anything about Loeffler's indictment or that his case was to come up in a short time. And when the notes finally were discounted I did not know that Brenner was connected with Loeffler, nor that Loeffler was behind the American Insulated Wire and Cable company."

In conclusion Mr. Curtis said:

"Judge Chetlain is the soul of honor, and I will spend every dollar I have left to place him right before the public."

He expressed his opinion of Anthony R. Silverston, but not for publication.

Three More Notes Discovered.

The disposition of three more Chetlain notes was discovered yesterday. They are for $550 apiece and were obtained by Attorney Charles E. Bartley from John H. Curtis. Mr. Bartley said he was made aware of the existence of the notes by an attorney formerly in his office, but whom he refused to name. He said neither he nor the other attorney had any litigation before Judge Chetlain. One of the notes was indorsed by Attorney Bartley and sold to J. W. Snyder, contractor and builder, with offices at 145 La Salle street. Mr. Snyder placed it with the Metropolitan Trust and Savings bank, which though Attorney J. G. Grossberg has started suit against Judge Chetlain for the money.

Payments Made in Various Ways.

Payment for Chetlain notes was not always made in money. In one case part payment was made by a gold ring of snake pattern and in another case the value was made up by lots in the town of Bremen. Attorney H. Carl Ellis made part payments in this manner, as is shown by the following receipts, given to Anthony R. Silverston, who handled Chetlain notes for Curtis and Denison:

> Chicago, Ill., May 19, 1905.—Received note from A. R. Silverston, made by Arthur H. Chetlain, for $500, dated May 11, 1905, due four months. To be returned before 11 o'clock, May 20, or $325 in cash and one diamond ring (snake pattern).
> H. CARL ELLIS.

That this deal went through was admitted by Mr. Ellis yesterday. A receipt for another note follows:

> Received from A. R. Silverston, note of Arthur H. Chetlain for $500, dated May 25th, four months, to be returned before 3 p. m., June 27th, or $300 cash and two lots, as per your representation.
>
> H. CARL ELLIS.

"I barely recall the deal about the lots," said Attorney Ellis. "Whatever that deal was, the money and property equaled the price of the notes."

Charge of Forgery Made.

The legality of the proceedings upon which the Rapid Transit Stock Car company was founded is in doubt, and a contest soon will be waged to show that the patent rights under which its cars are to be manufactured were never transferred from the rightful possessor—in short, that forgery was resorted to in the operation of a swindle that touched a number of leading railroad men of Chicago.

The original patents for the devices of the car rested in the Adamson Stock Car company, and through it, by the control of the stock, in William Wright, a promoter who died in 1904. His stock was in pawn in a Milwaukee bank, and, it is said, was not legally voted, in the purchase of the company by the Denison-Curtis crowd. The records were made to appear in regular form, and before long the supposed rights were passed to the present company.

Incorporated in South Dakota.

The Adamson Stock Car company, said to be named after the inventor of sundry devices for the protection of animals in travel, was founded under the laws of South Dakota, with a capital of $1,000,000, somewhere shortly prior to 1904. William Wright purchased $800,000 of the stock, the remainder being scattered among small buyers, including Judge Reininger of Independence, Kas., and farmers in the same state.

Mr. Wright, whose home was in Wisconsin, became an invalid early in 1904. His estate became entangled, and his stock, with his life insurance, was given as collateral for a loan of about $50,000 to Frank Bigelow of Milwaukee. In the month of August, 1904, he died, in Eureka Springs, Ark. His stock was "tied up," and no meetings of the board of directors were held for some months.

It was during this period that the serious attention of Denison and Curtis was attracted to the stock car, of which they must have had some previous knowledge. A small model of it was in an office in the same building with them, the Stock Exchange, and another in the Fine Arts building.

Denison Secures the Books.

In December of that year they began to look forward to securing possession of the company, which if properly managed should make a giltedged investment.

In some way Denison got possession of the books of the Adamson corporation and began to make plans for getting a hold upon the stock. Silverston, who at this time was a partner of the two men, states that they considered several plans aimed toward this end. One was the purchase of claims against the company, a legal suit, and an execution against the property. Another was to throw it into bankruptcy and to buy from the receiver.

These plans were dropped for the more immediate project of buying Wright's stock, probably cheap. Working along this line Curtis went to Milwaukee, from where he telephoned to Silverston that he had seen Bigelow and had secured an option on the stock. Upon this understanding plans for the formation of the Rapid Transit Stock Car company under the laws of Arkansas were hurried, and a stock book and a minute book were bought.

Rapid Transit Company Formed.

"Curtis and Denison," said Silverston, "claimed that they were in possession of the stock. They held a meeting behind closed doors with Attorney William Schulze. Denison was elected president, Curtis vice president, and Schulze a director. They told me that Judge Reiniger, who, I was told, was the only surviving director of the Adamson company, had sent his proxy to be voted.

"I had made a proposition in writing that in consideration of the sum of $2,000 and assuming the liabilities of the company I would buy the patents, the specifications for building the cars, and a full sized car built under the patents.

"This proposition, as previously arranged, was accepted and the supposed board of directors made a bill of sale to me conveying the said property; and I in turn sold it to the Rapid Transit Stock Car company as organized by me under the laws of Arkansas."

Silverston states that the stock was all in his name and that he transferred a nominal amount to Curtis, since the corporation treasurer and secretary was necessarily a resident of Arkansas, so that he could sign stock certificates as assistant in those offices. Silverston was elected vice president and general manager, a Chicago attorney was elected president, and another, Joseph Peacock, was elected a director to complete the majority of the board.

Darby & Brown, attorneys in the Monadnock block, adjusted the patent papers, the chain of title apparently being clear, and plans were set on foot for the financing of the proposition. Morgan, Young & Co., brokers in the Stock Exchange building, claimed to have interested Pabst, the Milwaukee brewer, in the scheme, and secured an option on the property. The hitch came when Mr. Morgan smelt a rat and insisted upon seeing the canceled stock of Wright. Negotiations came to an abrupt end.

Pushing Forward the Scheme.

William Hale Thompson is named as another prospective investor, but nothing definite was done until negotiations were begun through the agency of W. S. McKeand & Co., brokers. Through them the following men, who were described on a later prospectus in this manner, were interested:

Livingston T. Dickason, director of the Jackson Trust and Savings bank, president of the Columbia Creosoting company, president of the Eureka Lumber company.

Benjamin Thomas, president and general manager of the Chicago and Western Indiana, director of the American Trust and Savings bank.

Richard Fitzgerald, vice president and general manager of the Chicago Junction railroad, director of the Fort Dearborn National bank.

William J. Henley, vice president and general counsel Chicago and Western Indiana railroad.

Company Is Reorganized.

John Barton Payne of Winston, Payne & Strawn acted as counsel for these gentlemen in the deal and pronounced upon the title. He reorganized the company under the laws of West Virginia and the deal was completed, the trio of Curtis, Denison, and Silvertson accepting stock in the new concern. Instead of issuing and paying full for stock, ad interim certificates were given to the investors, the actual stock to be held intact until the first day of January, 1907.

Silverston holds that his actions alone were responsible for bringing the proceedings to a close. He had become suspicious of the transfer of the Adamson company rights and caused trouble, which was adjusted with difficulty.

Mrs. Wright Declines to Sell.

He went in search of Mrs. Wright, and, having found her, offered to buy her stock, which had been handed to her in January, when it was released by Frank Bigelow in the administration of her husband's estate. She declined to sell, but offered him a part interest if he would assist her to recover her rights. Her attorney, Amos, adopted a peculiar attitude on the situation, which may only be explained by what lay underneath.

Mrs. Wright stated that she went to Lawyer Payne personally and he would offer her nothing better than a return of a small sum, which she declares belongs to her without relation to the stock car deal. Denison and Curtis, it is said, were present at this interview, and she denounced them severely. Mr. Payne did not understand the situation and offered her the payment of $7,000, a claim which she made against them because that amount was allowed against her husband's estate through a note which Curtis and Denison had persuaded him to indorse.

These events brought the business of the stock car company to a standstill. The officers of the corporation do not understand the situation in which they have been placed by Curtis and Denison. They are not sure of their rights and they have hesitated to make trouble until they have learned something of the truth of the situation.

How Chetlain Entered the Deal.

Judge Chetlain's connection with this company came about in an unusual fashion. The stock of the first Rapid Transit company was in the charge of Silverston, and he thought that he knew where all of the certificates were located. He was surprised, then, when a man named Lyon, who was Chetlain's bailiff, walked into the office and said that he had come to see about his stock.

Upon inquiry Silverston was told that Judge Chetlain, whom he did not know personally, had sold the stock for $1,000. In amazement, Silverston demanded an explanation of this fact from Curtis and Denison, and, he says, Curtis admitted that he had surreptitiously abstracted from the stock book certificates for stock amounting to $200,000, and that Chetlain had sold $5,000 worth to Lyon for one-fifth of its face value.

Agreement Made in Writing.

Silverston states that in his indignation that this should be done secretly he demanded that the whole transaction be placed in writing. The agreement, signed by Chetlain, revealed that the judge gave his notes for $10,500 to the company, but that the stock and money besides were given to him. In fact, one-third of a part of their proceeds was to be returned to him in cash, and the company was to take up his notes with the proceeds of the sale of 25 per cent of his stock.

It was in this manner that the notes of Chetlain came into the hands of Silverston, who says that some of them found their way under the control of Loeffler et al.

CHICAGOAN SAILS ON ARCTIC QUEST.

Ernest Leffingwell Leaves Victoria with Anglo-American Expedition.

GOAL AN UNKNOWN SEA.

Seeks Large Stretch of Undiscovered Land West of Coast of Alaska.

Victoria, B. C., May 20.—Ernest DeK. Leffingwell, the Chicago geologist, sailed today with the Anglo-American arctic expedition which is headed by Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen, a Danish navigator.

Capt. Mikkelsen has been twice a member of arctic expeditions, and Leffingwell was a member of the Baldwin expedition. Others in the party are Ejnar Ditlevson, a Danish artist; Zoölogist George Howe of Harvard, and seven members of the navigating crew, a total of eleven.

The party sailed in the steamer Duchess of Bedford, and the purpose is to seek in the arctic a large stretch of undiscovered land believed to exist in the Beaufort sea, west of the coast of Alaska.

Route of Explorers.

From Victoria the duchess of Bedford will sail to Kadiak, thence to Siberia to secure sixty dogs, and then will enter the Arctic through Bering strait, skirting the shore to Banks island, where a depot will be made from which various scientific expeditions will be taken over the ice.

In the spring of 1907 Mikkelsen and Leffingwell will leave to journey over the ice in a northwest direction, taking provisions for 140 days, already prepared in compact soldered cases, with two dog teams, the intention being to kill dogs for food for the others if the supply decreases.

Instruments will be taken to make soundings through ice cracks with the hope of locating the edge of the continental shelf and the stretch of land which, according to the theory of the explorers, lies to the northwest of Alaska in an expanse at present unknown.

Expect to Return in 1907.

The explorers base their theory on the drift of the Jeannette and other vessels, the known flights of migratory birds, discoveries of Eskimo remains, and stories of natives who tell of land in the direction wherein the party intend to explore.

After they have started over the ice into the unknown in the spring of 1907, the duchess of Bedford will return to Victoria, bringing the results of preliminary scientific work and will then return north in charge of Dr. McLaren of Glasgow to find Mikkelsen and Leffingwell. When the search is successful or the decrease of their provisions make it necessary they will strike across the ice toward Wrangel island or the north Siberian coast, where they expect to be picked up in the fall of 1907.

RUIN AND MISERY IN PATH OF FIRE.

Four Hundred Square Miles of Territory Are Laid Waste—2,000 Homeless.

SETTLERS LOSE THEIR ALL

Burned Out Homesteaders in Piteous Plight; Trains in Wild Dash Through Flames.

Escanaba, Mich., May 20.—[Special.]—A trip on a special train today through the fire swept district showed that the area devastated is far greater than has been reported. The region covers at least 400 square miles and it is estimated at least 2,000 people have been made homeless and have lost all their possessions.

Three other towns were reported destroyed today, Woodlawn and Kingsley, on the Escanaba and Lake Superior line, and Perkins, on the Northwestern road. The fire extended on the north to Sands, on the east to the lake, on the south as far as Talbott, and on the west to nearly thirty miles beyond Channing. At the railroad offices at Channing the burned over district is estimated at more than 400 square miles.

Refugees are still coming in and some of the settlers who were burned out are leaving this section. Others who are penniless have announced their determination to begin all over.

Mile After Mile of Desolation.

In the territory swept by fire for miles and miles there is nothing except barren waste still smoldering in places. Everywhere are victims of the disaster, many with nothing in the world except the clothing on their backs.

At 7 o'clock this morning General Supt. W. E. Wells of the Escanaba and Lake Superior line sent out a special train along the main line and its branches for the purpose of making repairs to wires and also to carry into Wells, the road's headquarters, the burned out who want to come to the city.

The Escanaba road passes through the heart of the burned district. First traces of fire were met at Salva, which railroad station has been leveled to the ground. From Salva to Woodlawn is about five miles. As far as the eye could see on both sides of the track everything was burned. Not a scrap of green is left in the waste. The ground is covered with ashes, in places six inches deep.

Pass Embers of Towns.

Passing through a stretch of waste, Kingsley was pointed out. This lumber camp can only be located by a sidetrack and the trucks of a train that was burned. Not even ashes remain of the lumber piles. The wind was so strong that they were blown away. But for the trucks on the sidetracks the place looks like fire swept prairie.

A few miles up the track Woodlawn, or what was once Woodlawn, was pointed out. Here the ruins of another train were found and in a huge heap of scrap iron was seen the ruin of a big log loader. The train when it burned was loaded with coal. There are still great heaps of smoldering embers.

At Woodlawn farmers told of the heroism of a train crew which brought in the first load of refugees to Wells. Patrick Joyce, conductor in charge of the train today, was in charge of a refugee train on Friday. When the fire began he was at Woodlawn and when that place was destroyed he took all that he could carry on his train and made the run for Wells.

Trains' Wild Flight in Fire.

For five miles ahead of him there were fires on both sides of the track. These fires extended miles on either side. He sent the train through this sheet of flame and landed his passengers safely in Wells. Beyond Salva a score or more of families were picked up by Joyce. He found them fleeing along the right of way.

Just beyond Woodlawn stands one solitary house. It is owned by M. Q. Johnson. For miles all around him everything burned. The fire reached to within ten feet of it all around, but skipped over Johnson's house.

From Woodlawn to Northland are patches where the fire crossed the tracks. Every now and then acres and acres of ground were laid waste, but at Northland the flames came on with renewed vigor. Northland is a prosperous town of 500 people. It is on a small river at the base of a hill. It was down this hill that the fire came. It ran back for ten miles or more into the dense forest, yet it was stayed within ten yards of the city.

Coming back to the main line the train continued on to Channing, passing miles of burned territory, and many fires still burning fiercely. The danger, however, is believed to have passed.

At Channing no damage was found. Residents said that the fires came up to the edge of the town, but were checked. At the railroad offices here it was reported that the fire extended thirty miles to the west.

Quinnesec Gone; 1,000 Homeless.

A report from Quinnesec said that 1,000 people at that place were homeless. The entire town is wiped out.

Channing is at the end of the Escanaba road. It is sixty-four miles from Escanaba to Channing and over this entire distance and thirty miles beyond the fire burned.

Those who saw the fire at its worst say the flames soared a hundred feet high and looked like big balls of fire, which leaped from one tree to another.

From Channing the train started up Ford river branch. This is a logging road which leads into the heart of the forest. There are no towns on the branch, but many homesteaders and settlers. With but few exceptions all these had been burned out.

It was on this branch that the most pathetic incidents of the day were seen. Settlers who had gone into the heart of the forest to make a clearing were hemmed in when the fire marched through. They escaped with their lives, but that is all.

Aged Settler Gives Up Fight.

One of the first burned out settlers encountered was Peter Fazen, formerly of Milwaukee. Fazen is 60 years old. He lived on the homestead with his young son. On the day of the fire the boy was home alone, but made his way to neighbors and was saved. When Fazen returned from Woodlawn, where he had seen the whole town destroyed, his home was in ashes. Fazen asked to be taken aboard.

"I have given up," he said to a neighbor. "I have been here two years. All I have saved in my life was wiped out in two hours. I am too old to start all over. Were I a young man, I might attempt it. I am going to my daughter."

In the same camp was found another family that had lost all. It is E. R. Richardson and his wife and five children. They are penniless, but full of pluck. Mr. Lambert asked Mrs. Richardson if she and her family did not want to be taken out and brought to the city.

One Woman Shows Fortitude.

It was suggested that the danger was not over, but the woman said she had faced danger before and could do it again. The family will try to build a new home.

All along the branch there is nothing except wasted forests. Fires extended back for miles and miles, so that no one knows the distance. It was in this barren waste that settlers had their homes and were burned out.

Going up a spur of the branch a woman and several small children were found standing in a mass of ruins. It was Mrs. George Vincent. Her husband and she came from Remington, Ind., a year ago. They bought some land and built a small home. They fought the fire from 11 o'clock until 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. Then their home was burned.

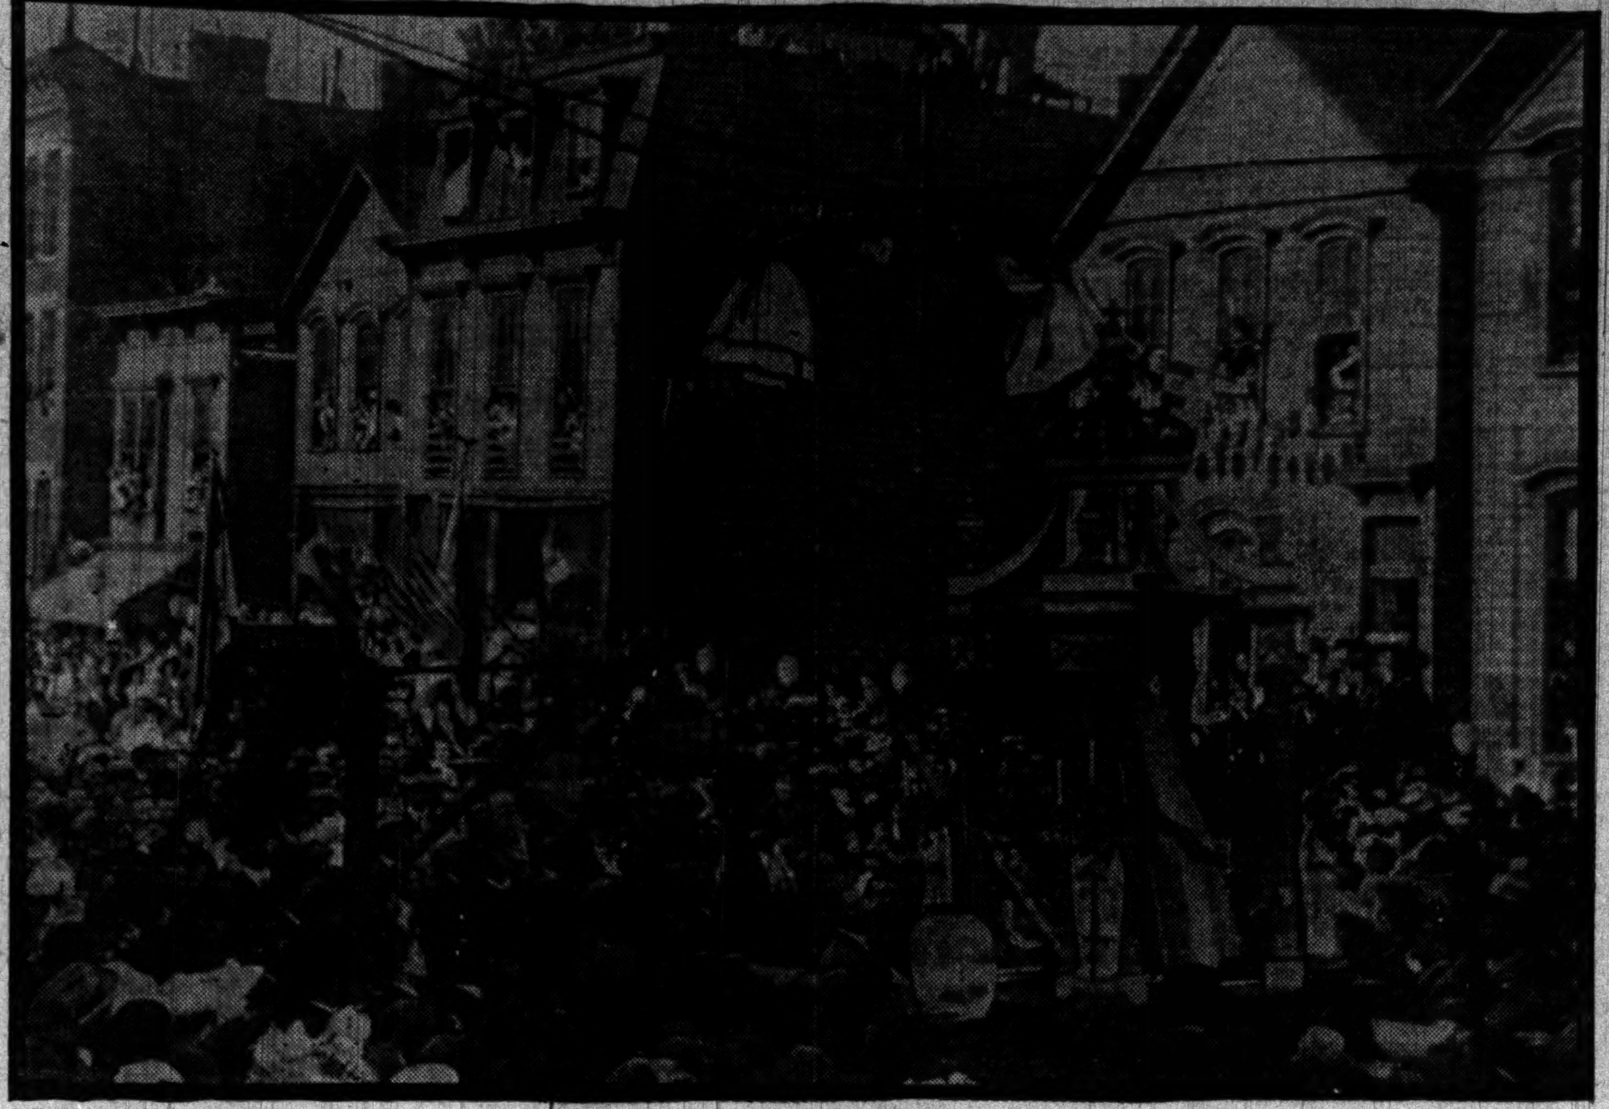
Girls, as Angels, Fly Over Street in North Side Church Festival.



Angels flying the full width of a street in the Italian district around the Church of St. Philippi yesterday held thousands spellbound. This event was a new feature of the annual Feast of the Blessed Virgin, given under the auspices of the church at Oak street and Gault court, and participated in by a large number of Italian societies.

A long procession spent the afternoon in winding through the streets of the parish. Its central figure was the image of the Virgin borne under a gorgeous canopy on a float carried by a score of men. As this passed the corner of Milton avenue and Oak streets two girls, garbed in "celestial robes," including gilt wings of wire and cloth, appeared above it from opposite sides of the street. Each carried a basket of flowers, which were scattered over the image as the "angel" recited a chant in Latin.

At its close the girls were drawn back over the cable on which they were suspended by pulleys into the windows of the houses from which they had appeared.

The festival continued during the evening, a large open space, brightly illuminated and decorated, being given over to booths and displays.

ELOPES WITH FRENCH MAID

ANOTHER PITTSBURG STEEL MAGNATE'S SON IN A ROMANCE.

John Alston Moorhead, Whose Grandfather Was One of the Great Group of Ironmasters, Defies His Parents and Marries Mother's Servant—Family in Anger Casts Him Off, and Declares He Is to Be Disinherited—Marriage Costs Him Millions.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 20.—[Special.]—John Alston Moorhead, a son of John Moorhead Jr., and a grandson of John Moorhead, who was one of the group of great Pittsburg steel magnates in his lifetime, left the family home a week ago with his mother's French maid. Today brings the news from New York that they were married in that city last Monday.

The marriage has severed all relations between the young man and his family. Friends of the Moorheads have been informed that he will be disinherited, which will mean the loss of a great fortune, for the head of the family is many times a millionaire.

Stormy Scene in Family.

According to those who are close to the family a stormy scene preceded the departure of the French maid. Mrs. Moorhead spent several months on the continent last year and on her return home in the autumn she brought over with her the pretty little French girl, whose family name appears to have been lost somewhere in transit. She was known here only as Frances.

The girl was a beauty, and she had not been installed in the Moorhead mansion a week before it became manifest that young John Alston, eldest of the children, was tumbling in love with her. Mrs. Moorhead finally took the boy's father into her confidence.

"Papa" Moorhead refused to take the attachment seriously. He said that if the boy were let alone for a little while it would pass off just like the measles. He would not even sanction the dismissal of the pretty maid as a measure of caution. And so things were permitted to drift for several months.

Refused to Give Her Up.

The attachment became so painfully manifest about a week ago that Mr. and Mrs. Moorhead summoned the young man into their presence and informed him that he must immediately cease his attentions to the family servant. To their utter amazement he not only refused point blank to obey, but declared his intention to make her his wife. That brought down such a storm that the boy threatened to quit the parental roof on the instant. Thereupon his father informed him it was no maid or no Moorhead millions.

Girl Ordered to Get Out.

Then the French maid was summoned and Mrs. Moorhead dismissed her. She told the girl she must leave the house at once and that her passage would be paid back to France. The maid tearfully prepared to obey, and the son announced that if she left he would go with her.

She left for New York last Sunday and a few hours later the young man was on his way to that city to join her. He was told that he need not expect any further communication with the house of Moorhead.

Friends of the family have been informed that after the marriage in New York young Moorhead and his bride went to the home of Horace Moorhead, the young man's uncle, on Long Island. It is said that they will stay there for a time in the hope that they may effect a reconciliation.

Young Moorhead was graduated from Yale in 1904. He was a member of the varsity football team in 1903 and was a Wolf's Head man. On his return to Pittsburg society matrons were more than glad to welcome him and designing mammas made it their business to display their eligible daughters.

UNION CARPENTER BEATEN; WATCH AND MONEY STOLEN.

Police Suspect That Thomas Sandeno Was "Officially Slugged" for Violating Rule of Labor Organization.

In the assault and robbery yesterday morning of Thomas Sandeno, 281 West Erie street, a union carpenter, the police suspect a "slugging" plot to punish the victim for breaking the rules of the union.

Sandeno was attacked when in front of the carpenters' headquarters, 40 Randolph street, where he had attended a meeting the night before. He was beaten about the head and his watch and $10 were taken from him.

When the injured man staggered into the Desplaines street police station at 7 o'clock in the morning he had difficulty in telling the police the circumstances of the assault. Two friends who accompanied him, however, informed the police that he had gone to the union meeting to stand trial on a charge of conduct disloyal to the organization, but a hearing was refused, and the two friends expressed the belief that Sandeno had been beaten by union sluggers as a disciplinary measure.

ROBINS SCORES THE RICH.

SOCIOLOGIST IN ADDRESS CITES POVERTY IN CHICAGO.

Speaks of Conditions Among Poor Classes on West Side as an Argument for Reform Work Among Them—Dr. Hirsch in His Reply Before Congress of Religion Answers Speaker with Socialistic Statement.

The opening meeting of the annual session of Congress of Religions, held at the K. A. M. temple, Thirty-third street and Indiana avenue last evening, was characterized by direct charges of selfishness against the church, the Jewish race, and, in a thinly veiled manner, the congregation, made by Raymond Robins in the opening address.

Mr. Robins addressed the congregation from the standpoint of a practical worker among the lower classes and a dweller in the slums. The manner in which he described the "real situation" was a strong indictment of wealthy church members such as were his auditors.

Tells of Squalor in Chicago.

"The Jewish race is a great people," he said. "They are liberal. Nevertheless, your brothers and sisters in another quarter of this city are living in the most squalid and miserable condition. The depths of degradation to which some have sunk through poverty alone is indescribable.

"I believe the poorest of the poor little Jewish babies that are born over on the west side is entitled to drink milk without chalk in it, unadulterated food, and other meat than the refuse from the stockyards. It is as much entitled to a sound education and moral surroundings."

Thinks Church Lacks Faith.

From the first utterance upon the platform of the temple, Mr. Robins' address was an arraignment of the church as being impractical. He declared that the church lacked faith in God and man. The church members and clergy, he said, lacked courage. The preachers, he charged, were untruthful, accepted tribute, and compromised between their convictions and the welfare of others. Just what was meant by the "acceptance of tribute," he did not say.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch followed Mr. Robins and began by denying Mr. Robins' first statement—that one God was the father of the entire world and of no particular sect—was a new creed. Although his address in no way contained personalities, he answered all the charges made by Mr. Robins.

Dr. Hirsch made a strong plea for the abolition of the competitive system and the establishment of a higher cooperative system. Although the word "socialism" did not enter his plea, it was taken as the statement of the principles of socialism.

"No man can call himself a self-made man to the extent that he owes no man anything for what he is," said he. "At least the land was there when he came on earth."

CHARGES AGAINST POLICE REST WITH THE ACCUSER.

F. O. Soderstrom Says Facts Regarding Protection of Gamblers Are Withheld by His Friend.

There was a lull yesterday in the west side anti-crime movement. F. O. Soderstrom, 1036 Park avenue, who made the sensational charge Saturday night in a meeting in St. John's Methodist Episcopal church that a police sergeant of the Desplaines street station had tried to hire a room for gambling purposes and had promised six hours' notice before a raid, added nothing to his accusations.

The speaker before the new society which was organized in the neighborhood of St. Louis avenue and Adams street, where Mrs. Maud Edwards was assaulted, apparently was content with leaving the vague charge which places every officer of the station under suspicion. He spent the afternoon hunting for the "friend" who had told him the story, but the "friend" did not materialize.

In the evening Mr. Soderstrom said he had seen his friend and that the latter would not consent to have his identity known.

FIRE PANIC IN TROLLEY CAR.

With Rear Platform Ablaze, Vehicle Crowded with Passengers Is Run a Mile in Evanston.

With its rear platform ablaze, a crowded Evanston avenue electric car was run at full speed for a mile through Evanston yesterday afternoon, although many frightened passengers begged the motorman to stop the car and let them off.

Some wires under the rear of the car, it is believed, became crossed, this resulting in the woodwork being ignited.

At the fire station at Grove street and Sherman avenue the car was stopped and the blaze extinguished.

AUTO FOILS A ROBBERY.

RESCUES PROSPECTIVE VICTIM; CATCHES HOLDUPS.

Three Men Stop A. E. Neilson, a Druggist, in North Clark Street, Near Locust, Knock Him Down, and Beat Him—Chauffeur Cosgrove Picks Him Up, Goes to Station, Gets Detectives, Pursues, and Captures the Fleeing Thugs.

An automobile saved A. E. Neilson, a druggist, from three holdup men last night and then captured the thugs. Mr. Neilson, who lives at 260 La Salle avenue, was walking in North Clark street, near Locust, when he was stopped by three men at midnight. One struck at him and he resisted.

The other two holdups then came to the aid of the leader and the four men fought their way to the middle of Clark street. Neilson was no match for his three assailants. He was beaten severely and knocked to the pavement.

Oaks L. Cosgrove, a chauffeur employed in an auto station at 466 North Clark street, was driving his car south when he approached the men. They parted as his car came close, and he, seeing Neilson lying on the ground, asked him what the trouble was.

Chauffeur Takes Druggist In.

As Neilson replied, the thugs ran. The druggist was assisted into the automobile, and Cosgrove put on the power and sped toward the Chicago avenue station. As he went he looked back and saw the three robbers run west in Locust street.

Sergeant Michael Sullivan and Detectives Tobin and Stromberg climbed into the car at the police station, and Cosgrove hurried back north in La Salle avenue. At Chestnut street three men were seen running north. They were arrested and taken back to the station, where they gave their names as Walter Garrity, Thomas Kelly, and Patrick Dinan. Neilson and Cosgrove identified them as the holdups.

Cosgrove is the chauffeur who recently took detectives on a successful run to Niles Center in a chase after horse thieves.

Robbed on "L" Platform.

While waiting for a train on the platform of the Metropolitan "L" at Halsted street in the evening Michael Cauley, 2599 Lexington street, was severely beaten and robbed of $13 and his watch by two men. Cauley was taken to a drug store by the police. No arrests have been made.

A few steps from his own door Thomas Kelly, 185 Peoria street, was knocked down and beaten with revolvers by two men, who took $4 and his watch. The police arrested Gus Morris, 32 years old, and Laurence Rositer, 32 years old. They were identified by Kelly.

Rob While Detectives Wait.

While several detectives and policemen were on "reserve duty" in the Desplaines street station in the evening thieves were active in the district. The house of Mrs. Emily Matioff, 254 Halsted street, over a jewelry store, was entered and silverware, jewelry, and clothing valued at $300 was taken.

RUNAWAY BEAR ROUTS CROWD IN THE LINCOLN PARK "ZOO."

Justice Boyer's Daughter Loses Part of Dress When Animal Uses Claws, and Her Companion Faints.

A small black bear escaped from its cage in Lincoln park yesterday afternoon and sent a crowd scurrying from the "bear pit" after it had torn the dress of Miss Emma Boyer of Evanston and frightened her companion, Miss Lilian Cosby, until she fainted. Both girls were taken from the "zoo" in a hysterical condition, after the bear had been lassoed and carried back to its cage. Miss Boyer is the daughter of Justice John H. Boyer, the terror of north shore autoists.

The animal escaped in an opening in the floor of its cage. Either playfully or with malicious intent, the bear rushed at Miss Boyer and seized a generous fistful of her Sunday gown. The girl did not question its motives, but kicked out vigorously, landing on the bruin below the belt and so enraging the animal that it renewed its scramble for her dress, tearing the front of her skirt to shreds.

Miss Boyer was saved from injury by the arrival of several park policemen, who beat off the animal. Then it was lassoed.

FAIL IN MURDER CASE VERDICT.

Jurors in Trial of Two Men Are Unable to Interpret Judge's Instructions.

After being out twenty hours the jury in the case of Ole Olesen and Thomas Kelly, charged with the murder of Joseph T. Mesenic, was unable to reach a verdict and was discharged by Judge Dupuy late yesterday afternoon.

TRIES CURE; DIES OF DOPE

PHILADELPHIA YOUNG WOMAN VICTIM OF DRUGS.

Purchases Poisonous Decoction Recommended to Sufferers from Catarrh and Becomes Addicted to Use of Preparation, Which Contains Cocaine—Many Persons Buy Trial Bottle and Then Drift Into Habit of Using Stuff—Illness, Then Death.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 20.—[Special.]—Following the investigation which he made of the circumstances surrounding the death of Angelina Carr, 27, of this city, on Saturday, Coroner Jerome has decided to wage a crusade against the drug stores which sell concoctions of morphine, cocaine, and other dope, and which masquerade as catarrh cures. The young woman died of cocaine poisoning as a result of taking one of the "cures" for several months.

Hundreds of dope victims in this city have no difficulty in obtaining the poisonous drugs they use, not in the raw state, but in the form of the "catarrh cures," which are really put up for sale to the victims of the cocaine habit. Many innocent persons, believing the preparations to be genuine catarrh cures, buy a trial bottle and then drift into the drug habit.

According to Mrs. Della Fagin, that was how her sister, Angelina Carr, became addicted to the habit. She had kept her sister and the other members of her family in complete ignorance of the fact that she was a slave to drugs. For some months past the young woman has shown symptoms of the evil habit, but her family never suspected the cause. About ten days ago she became ill, and a few days before she died she confessed to her sister.

Presbyterians May Bar Quack Ads.

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—[Special.]—One of the knotty questions before the Presbyterian general assembly is what action to take on the overture against advertisements of quack patent medicines in church papers, especially advertisements of cancer, epilepsy, and consumption "cures."

Two of the church papers have already agreed to "knock them out" if the assembly so orders, although they say it will be at great financial loss. One proposition is to appoint a committee of allopathic, homeopathic, osteopathic, and eclectic doctors from the eldership to pass on the advertisements, the expense to be borne by the church papers.

As these organs are private enterprises, many commissioners are against any action, and they desire the chairman of the committee on bills and overtures, who is himself an editor of one of the leading papers, to so report.

DONS SPEAKER'S TROUSERS; "UNCLE JOE" IS $60 RICHER.

E. X. Le Seuer Wears Distinguished Father-in-Law's Pantaloons and Forgets Bills He Put in Pistol Pocket.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—Speaker Cannon is $60 richer by reason of the forgetfulness of his son-in-law, Mr. E. X. Le Seuer, who, as the joke is on him, has not the courage to ask "Uncle Joe" for a return of the money.

Mr. Le Seuer is a banker in Danville and makes his home at the Cannon residence. One day while the speaker was away, either by accident or design, he wore to his office a pair of "Uncle Joe's" trousers. That night at his club a friend paid him $60, in three $20 notes, which he carelessly placed in one of the hip pockets of his father-in-law's belongings and then forgot all about the money.

Upon "Uncle Joe's" return a few days later he donned the garment which Mr. Le Seuer had been wearing and, reaching around into the pistol pocket, discovered the three $20 notes. He at once suspected what had happened and at the breakfast table accused his son-in-law of wearing his trousers during his absence.

"Why, you're much mistaken, Mr. Cannon," exclaimed Mr. Le Seuer. "I don't have to wear your clothes, I have several suits of my own."

"Quite true," returned the speaker, "but I know you have been saving yours and wearing mine while I have been away. Of course, I don't know that I object, but I think you ought at least to ask for the privilege."

"You are certainly mistaken and I don't see why you should accuse me of such a thing," said the son-in-law, beginning to be sensitive over the matter.

"O, it's all right, Ernest," replied the speaker, "I simply found $60 in the hip pocket of these trousers and I know I didn't put it there. But as you say you haven't worn them, I suppose, of course, you didn't put it there, so I'll just keep it." And he did.

Mr. Le Seuer was in Washington recently and reluctantly admitted the truth of the story which "Uncle Joe" has been telling with great glee.

"If I ever wear the speaker's trousers again, I'll be mighty careful to remove all the loose change," he told his friends.

MAYOR STIRS UP BIG LABOR STORM.

Union Men Demand an Explanation of Proposed Printing Award.

DELEGATIONS TO SEE HIM.

Name of "Unfair" Firm Will Be Eliminated from Mueller Ordinance.

Mayor Dunne's traction advisers have got him into a tangle with organized labor over the proposed Mueller certificate ordinance.

The labor forces assert that if the contract for the printing of the certificates is given to P. F. Pettibone & Co., who, six months ago, were declared to be "unfair" to the unions, the mayor will permit an insult to labor to go out from the city hall.

There was a storm of indignation yesterday at the federation of labor meeting. More emphatic was the protest at the meeting of typographical union No. 16. At both meetings the speakers appeared to be under the impression that the ordinance had been passed and the contract let.

Committees to Visit Mayor.

The mayor will be visited by several labor committees and will be confronted with the demand that the printing contract be transferred to another firm. The federation committee will be headed by President John J. Fitzpatrick, while a delegation of printers will be led by President E. R. Wright and Organizer John C. Harding.

"We shall insist that the Mueller certificates be printed by a firm which is friendly to organized labor," asserted Secretary Nockels of the federation. "If they are printed elsewhere we will brand them as an 'unfair' product and shall warn all union men against purchasing them. I am inclined to believe that Mayor Dunne is not responsible for the proposed contract award."

The delegation from the typographical union were loud in their denunciation of the policy of the mayor's traction cabinet in the federation meeting. William Black introduced the subject by reading a portion of Walter L. Fisher's letter providing for giving the printing of the certificates to Pettibone & Co.

Printers Aroused by "Insult."

The officials of the typographical union held a council over the situation in their headquarters at 277 La Salle street in the afternoon. It was agreed that Mayor Dunne had taken some "bad advice." Some of the leaders suggested that "Dr." Fisher had contrived the "insult" to the printers in an attempt to get even for the labor investigation of the Municipal Voters' league a year ago.

"The printers certainly are stirred over this action," said President Wright. "Perhaps the fact that we have a strike against the Pettibone firm was overlooked. We are willing to give the mayor the benefit of the doubt. We hope he will see that the contract is canceled, however, and if he does not do so it will be in order for us to see that he is placed on the 'unfair' list along with the printing shops which are resisting our demands for the eight hour day."

Oil on Troubled Waters.

Mayor Dunne explained in the evening he did not know there was any trouble between the union and Pettibone & Co.

"And I do not think Mr. Fisher, who drew the ordinance, knew that any difficulty existed between that firm and its printers," said the mayor. "Otherwise the firm would not have been picked out for the contract.

"The matter is remedied easily enough, however. All that is necessary to do is to authorize the controller to let the contract without specifying to what firm it shall go and then he can find a printer against whom there is no objection."

BINDERY GIRLS WILL STRIKE.

Walkout Which May Extend to 6,000 Workers to Begin in R. O. Law Shop Today.

A strike which may involve hundreds of working girls in the book binderies of the city is scheduled to begin today. Orders already have been issued calling out 150 girls employed by the Robert O. Law company, 121 Plymouth place, at noon.

The girls assert they are striking against a reduction in wages. Two weeks ago the Law company brought thirty-five nonunion girls from the east and put them to work. Shortly afterward, it is said, wages were cut. It is planned to cause a general walkout of the employés in the plant today, and simultaneously institute a fight for better wages and conditions all over the city. A struggle of this extent, it is said, may involve between 5,000 and 6,000 workers.

Committees of young women will begin this morning a tour of the larger binderies, most of which are connected with the Chicago Typothetæ, and at each plant will file demands with the employers for relief from present conditions. Refusal to grant changes will be followed by strikes.

In the large [typothetæ] shops about 1,500 bindery workers are employed. The majority of these are girls. Indications last night were that the firms in this class will not listen to the arguments of the young women. The typothetæ firms already are involved in a strike of the compositors, and assert they cannot consistently recognize one union while fighting another.

The news that the binders were preparing to strike came as a surprise to Secretary E. F. Hamm of the typothetæ.

"From what I know of the situation the action seems hasty," he said.

The freight handlers will send their demands for higher wages to the railroads today with the understanding that the companies will have thirty days in which to grant or refuse them.

COUNCIL TO HAVE A TRACTION NIGHT

Mayor Hopes to Present Tunnel and Mueller Ordinances This Evening.

CAR MEN IN CONFERENCE.

New York Meetings Will Seek Peace Between Fighting Companies.

Mayor Dunne and "Dr." Walter L. Fisher, his traction counsel, hope to get both the tunnel lowering and trolleyizing ordinance and the one providing for the manner of the issuance of Mueller law certificates before the city council this evening. If this is done both ordinances can be voted on at the next meeting.

The committee on local transportation will hold a special meeting this afternoon for the express purpose of pushing the tunnel and trolley ordinance along. It is expected to recommend the measure with no changes of any account. Some of the aldermen may have amendments they think necessary to safeguard the interests of the city, but that is as far as they will go, if they go that far.

The mayor said last evening he intended to present to the committee this afternoon the ordinance regarding the Mueller law certificates which "Dr." Fisher gave to him on Saturday.

"It remains for the committee," he said last evening, "to determine whether it will recommend it at once so it can go to the council forthwith. I would be glad, of course, if this were done as it would hasten the legal test of the validity of these certificates."

Some Aldermen Pick Flaws.

Some of the aldermen, however, have decided notions about the legality of the Mueller law ordinance and what will have to be done to cure what they consider its many illegalities. They do not agree with the law as understood by "Dr." Fisher and there is a chance for a difference of opinion which may delay a result for some time.

Mayor Dunne himself will alter "Dr." Fisher's ordinance in one particular at least before he sends it to the committtee. As the ordinance was drawn it authorized the controller to let the contract for the printing of the certificates to Pettibone & Co. without advertising. The Typographical union, which is in a controversy with Pettibone & Co., at once set up a protest and the mayor will strike that firm's name out of the ordinance and simply have it authorize the controller to let the contract without specifying to what firm it shall be let.

"There is no necessity of naming any particular firm," explained the mayor last evening.

New York Traction Conferences.

There begin in New York today conferences between the Union Traction company and the representatives of the North and West Chicago companies, which, the conferees hope, will result in a settlement of the troubles between these corporations. The plan, as understood in Chicago, is to form a new company, its stock to be allotted on an agreed percentage among the stockholders of the three present companies according to their holdings in them. This, of course, means a scaling down of all the holdings, and the question at issue is said to be what the proportion of scaling in each company shall be.

The argument made for a compromise, however, is that if the Union Traction and its underlying companies keep on fighting, pretty soon they will not have anything left to fight over, or, to put it another way, it is good policy to get some meat on the bone before quarreling over it.

Darrow on Grosscup Letter.

Clarence S. Darrow, in commenting on the letter Judge Grosscup wrote him April 22, 1905, suggesting a revocable license plan as a way of settling the traction question, said:

"The letter was a long one and treated on other methods besides the one which has now been brought to the front by the mayor's advisers. It was entirely indefinite, also, as much so as some recent suggestions on the traction question in the same line. It was submitted to Mayor Dunne and considered by him, but met with little favor."

John M. Harlan, an insistent advocate of the revocable license idea, became Judge Grosscup's adviser. Later "Dr." Fisher, a close friend of Harlan, appeared as the mayor's counsel. Then Mr. Fisher and Mr. Dunne came out for revocable licenses.

HOT WEATHER CAUSES DEATHS.

Increased Mortality for Last Week Is Shown by Report of the Health Department.

Increased mortality in Chicago during the last week is ascribed to hot weather in the report of the city health department, which will be issued today. Thirty-three more deaths under 5 years of age were reported than during the week previous and forty-nine more than during the corresponding week last year.

Total deaths from all causes were fifty-nine more than the previous week and 123 more than for the corresponding week last year.

A chart showing the mean levels of Lake Michigan during the last eleven years has been prepared by the department. With it is an explanation that agitation for limiting the flow into the drainage canal from the lake is not justified by statistics.

CITY TO INSPECT HALLS.

BARTZEN ISSUES ORDER TO PREVENT OVERCROWDING.

All Public Meeting Places, Including Theaters and Churches, Will Be Measured and Cards Giving Legal Seating Capacity Will Be Posted—Police Will Enforce Law—White City Accident Will Result in Action by Building Department.

All churches, public halls, theaters, and other buildings used for public gatherings will be measured and the seating capacity ascertained within the next month by inspectors from the building department, under instructions from Commissioner Bartzen.

Cards bearing the date of measurement and inspection and giving the seating capacity will be placed in conspicuous places in the various halls.

"It will probably take two weeks to place these cards in all the churches in Chicago," said Commissioner Bartzen yesterday. "No place where the public is housed will be exempt.

Police Have Power to Act.

"The police also will have authority to enter these places at any time, and should more than the specified number be in the building the officers will see that the law is obeyed. Following this, action will be taken by my department."

Practically all the churches ordered closed by Commissioner Bartzen last week were allowed to open yesterday for services.

"Committees from most of the churches visited me," he said, "and assured me they were making alterations."

Discusses White City Accident.

Commissioner Bartzen declared he did not know what action he would take following the injury to twelve persons in an accident on the White City scenic railway.

Chief Inspector Andrew Hughes inspected the structure on Saturday, and, after a dozen cars had made the trip safely, gave permission to the management to use the "coaster." Today, however, the "coaster" again will be inspected. If it is not deemed safe it will be ordered closed.

The management of the amusement park declared yesterday the accident was unavoidable and that if no persons had jumped none would have been injured.

"Every one became excited when the cars crashed," said the publicity manager. "A strong north wind was blowing, and this kept the car from going up the incline safely."

NEW DEMOCRACY SLOGAN SOUNDED.

"Isms" of Radicals Included in a Declaration of Principles.

"DRYS' ONLY ARE BARRED.

I. M. O. League, Socialists, Hearst, and Referendum All Are Given Show in the Platform.

The Cook County democracy announced its "declaration of principles" yesterday. It is a political composite. To frame it the makers took chunks from the I. M. O. league, the Referendum league, the Hearst democracy, the old populist theory, and the present socialist party platform. Every "ism" gets a show except the prohibitionists. They are directly antagonized.

The declaration starts out with the statement "we are confronted by an arrogant privileged class that has arisen among our own people, controlling our government, many of our courts, legislatures, councils, and our political party committees," and "By blindly worshiping the mere name of democracy we have allowed our party organization to pass into the hands of designing men."

Five Principals Are Advocated.

So it is announced the county democracy must go out and capture this party organization in order to preserve the liberties of the people, and it is to be done by advocating these principles:

The initiative and mandatory referendum and right of recall.

Direct primary nomination of candidates by plurality vote.

Home rule in taxation.

Abolition of government by injunction.

The largest amount of personal liberty consistent with the rights of others.

The wording of the first principle did not exactly suit Dr. Axel Gustafson and he wanted it to read: "The sovereign initiative referendum, veto, and recall," and explained there was a great deal of difference between the two. His auditors could not see it and voted down his amendment.

Composite Committee Is Planned.

Robert E. Burke explained the method by which it was hoped to make these principles operative. A campaign committee of 125 was to be appointed. Twenty-five were to be named by Mayor Dunne, twenty-five by the federation of labor, twenty-five by the County Democracy, twenty-five by the I. M. O. advisory committee, and twenty-five by the Progressive alliance.

He also explained he had arranged for a conference at 2 p. m. today between the committee which called on Mayor Dunne last Tuesday to get his coöperation and A. M. Lawrence, who represents William Randolph Hearst west of the Alleghanies. Everybody promised to be on hand.

John M. Vail reported for the committee which called on Mayor Dunne to invite him to assume leadership of the new faction of the democracy.

Secretary Burke announced invitations had been sent to Senators Tillman of South Carolina and Bailey of Texas to speak at the picnic June 23 at Brand's park.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD TO HONOR TWO REFORMERS.

Efforts of Edwin Burritt Smith and Susan B. Anthony in the Interest of Human Progress Are Eulogized.

Memorial services in honor of the late Edwin Burritt Smith, lawyer, civic reformer, and writer, held yesterday afternoon in University Congregational church, Fifty-sixth street and Madison avenue, drew forth tributes of praise from his colleagues in the various movements with which he was identified.

Letters were read from President Charles W. Eliot and Charles Eliot Norton of Harvard university, Morefield Story of Boston, John G. Woolley of the prohibition movement, and Graham Taylor of Chicago Commons.

"Mr. Smith believed profoundly in a democracy," said Prof. Albert H. Tolman of the University of Chicago. "He was not afraid of the 'river wards,' or the great influx of the foreign born. When others pleaded for greater civic efficiency, no matter what the cost, he held out for more power for the city council that thus democracy might be vindicated."

Addresses were made by Judge Henry V. Freeman, William Kent, Ald. Frank I. Bennett, L. Wilbur Messer of the Young Men's Christian association, Merritt Starr of the Chicago Literary club, and the Rev. Frederick E. Dewhurst.

Several hundred persons attended a memorial service in honor of Susan B. Anthony in Music hall in the afternoon. Mayor Dunne referred to Miss Anthony as the greatest woman of modern times and prophesied that her name would go down in history near the head of a list of the great women of all times.

A paper in eulogy of Miss Anthony, written by Mrs. George B. Carpenter, was read by Mrs. H. W. Duncanson. Miss Jane Addams paid high tribute of praise to Miss Anthony's career.

Canavan, M. B. Silverman, George G. Karson, George Dempsey, Thomas C. Atkinson, Edward D. Mullen.

Permanent Wall Papers.

Why not decorate your walls with a paper so good in color and design that you wish it to be permanent?

Permanency of decoration is both physical and, so to speak, spiritual. Wall paper to be physically permanent must be of fine and solid texture and printed in lasting colors. To be spiritually permanent, the color and design of the paper must be of a quality to satisfy permanently one who lives with it.

Our imported wall papers cost a little more than the domestic, but the difference in cost is more than balanced by the quality of the imported goods and the satisfaction derived from living with a paper good in color and pattern.

We have a corps of skilled decorators and paper hangers which we place at your service, or we will sell papers to your own order.

We have some excellent two-toned patterns, English and German, from 25c to $5.00 per roll; German felts from 50c to $5.00 per roll; English Chintz effects, foliage patterns, especially appropriate for summer houses, from 40c to $3.50 per roll; papers of the French school, in floral designs, garlands, and in rococo styles, from 50c to $3.00 per roll; Japanese papers from $2.00 to $10.00 per roll; nursery patterns, in figure and foliage, from 50c to $1.00 per roll; English decorative friezes, landscape effects, in oil stain, 50c to $1.50 yard.

We do not carry the largest stock of wall papers in the city, but we do claim to carry nothing that is not both beautiful and serviceable.

DOMINGAN LEADER TO DEFY CONGRESS

Ex-President Morales Threatens New Revolution to Evict Americans.

MAKES AMUSING DEMANDS

Tells Roosevelt to Return Customs Money, Now in New York, or He Will Make Trouble.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—The administration has emerged from the railroad rate fight to find itself confronted with the ever recurring Santo Domingan question. Ex-President Morales has informed President Roosevelt that if congress adjourns without ratification of the pending treaty which authorizes American intervention in the island he will inaugurate a revolution against the existing government with the slogan: "Santo Domingo for the Dominicans."

Morales will want from the United States these things: Return of the $1,300,000 of Dominican customs now on deposit in New York; withdrawal of Americans from Dominican customs houses and of American warships from Dominican waters; an American protectorate without the intervention character, and employment of an American military officer to organize and train an army.

President's Answer Is Sharp.

The demands of Morales are preposterous and the answer the president has given is contained in instructions telegraphed to Commander Southerland, commanding the American fleet in Dominican waters, and to the governor of Porto Rico, directing them to observe strict neutrality, but to prevent filibustering expeditions from setting out from American territory. In other words, the administration will throw as many obstacles as it can in the way of the landing of Morales and his supporters and supplies in Santo Domingo.

It would prefer the maintenance in power of the existing government headed by Gen. Ramon Caceres, who, although the assassin of ex-President Heureux, has the saving grace of standing by his word. He announced last December he would support the pending treaty and insist upon its ratification by the Dominican senate, provided certain changes limiting American intervention were made.

The administration agreed to comply with his wishes. He has seen month after month go by and the chances of ratification become more and more remote. He understands the fight of his life is on the eve of taking place. Morales, who lost popularity as a result of the negotiation of the treaty, was overthrown and Caceres came into power. Caceres adopted the Morales policy and Morales abandoned it. Now Caceres finds his popularity diminishing and Morales returning to public favor.

All the Grumblers with Morales.

All the disaffected elements in the island are flocking to the banner of the ex-president. It is easy to draw from this the conclusion, which facts establish to be well founded, that American intervention has ceased to have any attraction for the mass of the people.

Indeed, the situation of Americans in Santo Domingo is not pleasant at this time, according to the official reports received by the president and Secretary Root. The lives of some of the customs officials, notably those of Americans stationed at Monte Cristi, are in constant danger. Collector St. Elmo does not dare to leave the town to inspect the customs houses on the Haitian frontier, a few miles away, because of the certainty of ambush. He slips out at night and returns before daybreak. The naval officer detailed by Commander Southerland to remain at Monte Cristi deems it a necessary precaution to have his revolver always handy.

Monte Cristi is the hotbed of revolutionary agitation and of the anti-American sentiment. At the same time the hatred of Americans extends to other parts of the island, including those controlled by Caceres. The Dominicans always have suspected that the United States designed to take possession of their territory. They know we hold 55 per cent of all the customs receipts collected since American intervention began in April of last year.

Politicians Hunger for Boodle.

The politicians are looking with hungry eyes upon the fund, which has assumed immense proportions in their eyes. They were told the United States would use this sum to pay their foreign debts. They are beginning to believe the United States proposes to keep it. They practically are united now in the demand that their government insist this fund be returned. They are discussing what shall be done with it when they get it back. They have divided it theoretically into twelve equal portions and have offered prizes to the man who offers the best plan for the disposition of each $100,000. This means of course that the whole fund will be distributed ultimately among the politicians in control of the treasury.

But the Dominicans whose mouths are watering in anticipation will be disappointed. President Roosevelt announces positively that the money will not be returned to the Dominican government except in compliance with a specific direction by congress; and such direction is not likely in view of the attitude the president has adopted.

No Return of Customs Money.

For the United States to return the money to Santo Domingo would be an act of bad faith. It would be followed by foreign intervention in the island, which the president sought to avoid by the negotiation of the pending treaty.

Not only will the president not return the money but even if congress adjourns without ratification of the Dominican treaty he proposes to enforce the policy of intervention which has been pursued for the last year. Senator Cullom, who was charged recently to ascertain if the senate would ratify the treaty, has convinced himself it will not do so. The only recourse of the executive is to urge congress to pass a joint resolution confirming what has been done and authorizing its continuance.

Assuming that Morales succeeds in reestablishing himself in power, then the failure of the treaty is certain. By Morales' direction it would be rejected by the congress in Santo Domingo. Consequently, the administration is figuring with more than ordinary interest upon the chances of success of the ex-president. The Scorpion, one of the American gunboats in Dominican waters, recently intercepted a wireless message signed by Morales, stating that he had $80,000 with which to inaugurate his revolution.

Where Morales got the money is one of the questions the administration has been investigating.

The cruiser Columbia, which arrived at the League Island navy yard several days ago to undergo repairs, is being prepared hastily for sea and will leave for Santo Domingo tomorrow with 600 marines. Under hurry orders from the navy department detachments of marines from Boston, Brooklyn, Washington, and Norfolk arrived there during the day and are on board the Columbia.

AUTO INJURES AGED MAN.

EBENEZER PRINDLE, 90 YEARS OLD, HURT IN EVANSTON.

Two Occupants in Machine Assist Victim and Then Drive Away—They Are Now Sought by the Police—Recovery from Effects of Accident Is Doubtful—Chief Frost's Men Warn Against Fast Driving, and No Arrests Are Made.

Ebenezer Prindle, 90 years old, was struck by an automobile in Evanston late yesterday afternoon and may die as the result of his injuries. The autoists escaped and the police of the North Shore are searching for them. Mr. Prindle is a pioneer of Evanston. He still is an active member of a real estate firm.

The accident occurred at Oak avenue and Davis street. Mr. Prindle, with M. S. Baldwin, 1111 Ridge avenue, was crossing in Davis street, when the machine, a small auto, approached from the east. Baldwin seized Mr. Prindle by the arm and attempted to drag him from the path of the car.

Fails to Regain Consciousness.

His action was the fraction of a second too late and he barely saved himself by leaping aside as Mr. Prindle was knocked down.

The two occupants of the machine assisted Baldwin in carrying him to the side of the street. They then drove away. A crowd quickly gathered. Dr. M. F. Bragdon assisted in caring for Mr. Prindle.

He was taken to his home at 1576½ Maple avenue, and late in the night had not regained consciousness. Policemen Johnson and Hayes tried to trace the machine, but were unsuccessful.

Police Warn Fast Autoists.

A new plan of Chief Frost of Evanston yesterday reduced Sunday "scorching." Each driver who appeared to be approaching the speed limit was signaled by a white gloved officer, who saluted and reminded him of the speed limitations. No arrests were made in any of the towns north of Evanston.

While no automobilists have been marched out of Fort Sheridan at the point of the bayonet, owners of machines who have been accustomed to using the pretty thoroughfares of the military reservation are suffering mental worry on account of Col. Whitall's order that automobiles must be run through the fort at five miles an hour.

AUTO CRASH FATAL TO WOMAN.

Machine Turns Over on Occupants, Killing One and Seriously Injuring Three Others.

Erie, Pa., May 20.—Mrs. Julia C. Young, wife of Albert W. Young of Cleveland, was killed and three other persons seriously injured in an automobile accident near Girard, Pa., shortly after midnight this morning. The party had left Cleveland early in the evening to make the run to Erie.

The accident occurred while the party was speeding. In turning a sharp curve the machine crashed into a telegraph pole, throwing the occupants out and turning over on top of them.

Mrs. W. H. Shurmer and E. C. Miller, the chauffeur, escaped with but slight injuries.

TROUBLE IN CARDIFF MINES.

Pontiac Sheriff Is Dispatched to Quell Disorder—Striking Miners Cut Down Wires.

Bloomington, Ill., May 20.—Sheriff Hoke of Pontiac today was called to Cardiff to quell trouble with striking miners. He was informed by the president of the Cardiff Coal company in Chicago that the strikers were causing trouble. Wire connection with the town is broken and the extent of the outbreak is not known here, as the sheriff has not returned.

Attempt to Run Plum Run Mines.

Steubenville, O., May 20.—Two more carloads of nonunion men were brought into the neighborhood of the United States Coal company's Plum Run mines today, and tomorrow or on Tuesday an attempt will be made to open the mines and run them nonunion. No trouble was experienced by the men or the mine officials, although the strikers stood about in a sullen attitude.

Think Mine Buildings Were Fired.

St. Clairsville, O., May 20.—The tipple, powerhouse and generator of the Purslove coal mines, three miles north of here, were burned tonight with a loss of $30,000. New machinery had been installed recently and was turned over to the company on Saturday. The fire is said to be of incendiary origin.

Wisconsin Insurance Commissioner Denies He Refused to Get Warrants in Bribery Case.

Commissioner of Insurance Host of Wisconsin, who was in Chicago yesterday, denied that he had declined to swear out a warrant in the Secretary of State Houser bribery case, when asked by District Attorney Frank L. Gilbert to do so. Mr. Host added that he will swear out a warrant at any time the district attorney requests it of him. He had planned to leave for the south on Wednesday, but said he would postpone the trip and go back to Madison, if necessary.

LOSES $200,000 IN POKER AT SEA

William Thaw, Son of Pittsburg Millionaire Family, Hard Hit at Cards?

WOMAN GIVES UP $100,000.

Half Divorced Wife Sacrifices Big Sum to Keep Husband from Remarrying.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE. New York, May 20.

Loses $200,000 to Poker Sharps Crossing Ocean.

William Thaw, the erratic scion of Pittsburg millions, is back in the limelight as a victim of poker sharps. He is credited with losing $200,000 on the Atlantic liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, which reached New York Saturday night. The whole amount was won by two men—"Doc" Owen, a notorious card sharp and a confederate whose name was only known to other passengers as "Mac."

The story of the sensational poker session, which lasted—with only short intermissions for necessary sleep—from the time the vessel left Cherbourg until it arrived at this port, became public only because the two gamblers would leave Thaw alone for long enough intervals to try to lure a woman on board into promises of future speculation.

In trying to warn her against Owen, several of the other passengers learned what was going on in "Doc's" stateroom, where the two card artists were plying Thaw with champagne and cold decks.

This woman was Mrs. D. Bonser, an English woman, who is on tour for her health. She said tonight Owen and his friend had been eager to induce her to invest in racetrack betting with them. She says she and several other passengers learned that Mr. Thaw had been stripped of all the cash he brought with him, had cashed several drafts aboard ship, and lost all the proceeds and besides had given notes for huge amounts for additional losses to the two gamesters.

Loses $100,000 to Keep Husband from Remarrying.

Mrs. Adams, the half divorced wife of Frederick Thompson Adams of this city, is willing to sacrifice $100,000 alimony in order to prevent him from getting a decree and marrying another woman. She obtained an interlocutor decree last February and the court consented to a final decree at any time after May 3.

Mrs. Adams has not applied for a final decree because, she says, her conscience will not permit her to. She says she believes she will again love her husband and be loved by him. She asks that the divorce action be discontinued, but she desires no reconciliation at the present moment.

$1,000,000 Garbage Plant Destroyed.

Fire destroyed the mammoth plant on Barren Island where was disposed the garbage of greater New York this afternoon, entailing a loss approximating $1,000,000. The plant, consisting of fourteen buildings which covered four acres, was owned by the New York Sanitary Utilization company. The buildings were from one to three stories in height.

Man Killed in Fight on Rockefeller Estate.

There was a battle tonight between three Italians employed at Boxwood, the country domain of John D. Rockefeller at Pocantico Hills, and four Italians said to be agents of a secret society which has been trying to get the Rockefeller employés to contribute funds.

When the smoke cleared one lay dead, with a bullet through his brain, while two others were badly wounded.

Many Wounded in Fight at Socialist Meeting.

Fifty Austrians who attended a socialist meeting in a hall back of the saloon of Joseph Stonich in Brooklyn, got into a fight early this morning. Somebody turned out the lights and they fought in the dark with knives. Before the police reserves arrived the neighbors saw more than a dozen wounded men carried away. Just as the reserves drove up to the hall the rioters swarmed into the street and divided. Twenty-four Austrians were arrested. Three wounded men were found in the hall and one of them may die.

OVERSEER EXCELL DESERTS VOLIVA AND ZION CHURCH.

General Recorder and Financial Secretary of Dowie's Successor Also Resigns, Alleging Ill-Health as Cause.

Evidence of internal dissension in the Voliva administration became public yesterday when the present head of the Zion City forces announced that one of his overseers had resigned from the church, that another had been reduced in office, and that his general recorder and financial secretary had resigned from his position.

John G. Excell, overseer and ecclesiastical secretary, renounced the church Thursday afternoon, and his letter of resignation, accompanied by that of his wife, stated that they disagreed strongly with certain tenets of the belief. Voliva declared that Excell had refused to surrender Zion City stocks that had been presented by Dowie, and that the resignation had been demanded. The cause for the reduction of Overseer H. E. Cantel, formerly in charge of the church work in Great Britain, was given as one of conscience. He stated in the meeting that he feared he had become autocratic in his administration in office and wished to be lowered to a rank where he might be of more use.

A. C. Jensen said ill health caused him to resign his place as general recorder and financial secretary. Deacon C. J. Carey, an Australian banker, recently come to Zion City, was appointed as his successor. Abraham F. Lee succeeds Excell as ecclesiastical secretary.

Voliva asserted in the meeting that under the new administration almost $100,000 will be saved by the reduction of salaries.

Patience of Head of Catholic Church Is Taxed, and He Is Determined to Get Up and Receive Spanish Churchmen and Pilgrims — Soothes Sisters' Alarm by Telling Them Old Men Must Take Few Days' Rest Occasionally.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ROME, May 20.—The pope is still confined to his bed with rheumatism, but the pain in the knees has decreased. His physician says his condition is reassuring and that there is absolutely nothing to warrant apprehension. The pope is impatient at being compelled to remain in bed and insists upon receiving tomorrow the Spanish bishops and pilgrims who came to Rome to attend the beatification of the eight Dominican friars who were killed at Tonquin. Dr. Lapponi, however, is not likely to let his holiness receive them. The pope has told his sisters, who appeared to be worried, that it was perfectly natural for a man 71 years old, as he was, to spend a few days in bed occasionally.

Is Suffering from Angina?

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, May 21, 3 a. m.—Rome correspondents generally agree that the pope is better, and that his condition is not alarming, but the correspondent of the Chronicle says that within the inner circle of the papal court it is no secret that the pope is suffering from an attack of angina, to which he has long been subject. Quite recently an eminent prelate of the pope's own household expressed anxiety on this score. No one who has seen the pope, particularly during the last twelve months, can fail to have been struck by the evidences of the rapid encroachment of old age. Moreover, the pope is profoundly affected by the systematic boycott to which he is subjected by a majority of the cardinals resident in Rome, who disapprove of his policy, manners, and methods.

PALMA TAKES OATH OF OFFICE.

Inaugurated Second Time as President of Cuba and Receives Congratulatory Address from Spanish Minister.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

HAVANA, May 20.—President Palma was inaugurated president of Cuba at the palace at noon today in the presence of the justices of the Supreme court, members of congress, the diplomatic corps, the apostolic delegate, and a number of officials.

After taking the oath Señor Palma said: "Having fulfilled this constitutional precept, I take possession of the presidency of the republic."

Señor Gayton Ayala, the Spanish minister, addressed a complimentary congratulatory speech to President Palma, to which he responded.

Root Speaks at Cuban Banquet.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—The fourth anniversary of the independence of Cuba was celebrated at a banquet given by Minister Quesada at the Cuban legation today. The guests included Secretary Root, Senator Foraker, Admiral Schley, and Gen. J. Franklin Bell.

Secretary Root, responding to a speech by Minister Quesada, said that the United States had no desire for one inch of the territory of any of the Latin-American republics, and the example of the policy carried out toward Cuba, he thought, should be taken as evidence of this government's disinterested policy in desiring to promote better relations with them.

POSTER BATTLE IN FRANCE.

Second Balloting for Members of Parliament Attended by War of Words —Victory for Bloc.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, May 20.—Cold, windy weather, with clouds occasionally broken by a gleam of sunshine, prevailed here today for the second balloting for members of the chamber of deputies. The feature of the election was the fierce battle maintained by posters. The bill stickers never were busier. As soon as one poster was up it was covered with another. Candidates, with printers' ink, hurled the fiercest denunciations at each other.

"You are a clerical," said one.

"It is an infamous calumny," was the reply.

Elsewhere posters called the opposing candidate coward, traitor, liar, and forger. The result has proved a big victory for the Bloc. MM. Marchand, Galli, Auffray, Villeneuve, Congy, Montebello, Driant, and Deroulede bit the dust. Viviani, Magnaud, and Grousseir won easily. M. Labori was elected at Fontainebleu. Pietri, leader of the confederation des Jaunes, was beaten at Brest by M. Goude, who became notorious in fomenting disorder at that great naval port. Paul Deroulede was beaten by 5,000 majority. It is Combes rather than Clemenceau who conquered today. It was his spirit that permeated the elections.

FEAT IN BALLOON PLAN OF PRINCE.

Jaime and Austrian Expert Ready to Start from England Across Baltic.

GOAL 1,000 MILES AWAY.

Baron Korwin Will Use Pure Hydrogen to Inflate Bag for Long Trip.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1906: By the New York Herald.]

LONDON, May 20.—More remarkable than any feat of aerial navigation on record is a balloon trip to be made from London this week by Prince Jaime, son of Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne, and Baron Josef von Korwin, a lieutenant in the Austrian army.

The aeronauts will attempt to cross the Baltic sea to some point in Austria, covering a distance approximately of 1,000 miles. The expedition will be without a parallel, the nearest approach being a voyage made by Comte de la Vaulx, from Paris to Kieff in Russia during the Paris exposition.

Will Use Pure Hydrogen.

The start is to be made tomorrow if the wind is blowing in the right direction. Baron Korwin explained tonight that the balloon will be inflated with pure hydrogen, because it has double the carrying power over ordinary gas.

"We are using hydrogen for the purpose of making greater headway," he said. "In spite of the fact that it is dangerous we will carry enough provisions to last forty-eight hours, life belts, and a quantity of grease, the same as Holbein used in swimming the channel, in case of accident in crossing the sea. The balloon and its equipment weighs 900 pounds, and ballast 1,600, while the human weight will be 300. The ascent will be made any day this week when the wind is blowing from the north or northwest."

Trip for Government.

The start is to be made from the grounds of the Austrian exhibition. The trip is planned in the interest of the Austrian government.

Prince Jaime is a brother of Archduchess Blanca of Austria. During the Russo-Japanese war he fought for the czar, subsequently being decorated for gallantry.

Tests on Eye at High Altitude.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, May 20.—Dr. Daulnoy, eye specialist, interviewed on the subject of his recent experiments on the human eye while in a balloon at an altitude of 6,000 feet, said:

"My first observation was increased acuteness of vision at high altitudes. I flung a bottle overboard into the lake from a height of 6,000 feet. Not only were two others in the balloon able to follow its descent towards the earth, but they were able to see the neck of the bottle disappear beneath the water.

"I think there may be a wide field of treatment in certain diseases of the eye if it were carried out at a high altitude. At present there are three diseases in which medical science practically is powerless—glaucoma, choroiditis, and the unfastening or loosening of the retina. In the treatment of choroiditis certain drops are applied to the eye. I think if they are applied at high altitudes the effect would be astonishing. Definite results of the experiments thus far show that at great altitudes the tension of the eye is greatly increased. Arterial circulation in the retina is much more rapid, which is of the highest importance in the treatment of paralysis of the eye nerve.

TO THE RESCUE OF THE FORESTS.

The time when the natural forests of America were believed to be inexhaustible has passed. The government of the United States has established forest reserves in different parts of the union and some of the states have established state reserves. Now the men who have been responsible beyond all others for the destruction of the forests are taking tardy steps to atone in some measure for their error. The Lumbermen's association has voted to give a large sum of money for a school of forestry at Yale university. If the individual members of the association will go farther and promise to follow the advice of the experts as to the cutting of trees and the replanting of the forests the mischief hitherto done in ignorance will be forgiven them.

The first school of forestry in the United States was established at Cornell university, but has since been discontinued. There are courses in forestry given now at Harvard, Yale, and Michigan universities, and at Biltmore, N. C. Sixteen states have departments or bureaus in charge of forest work. The bureau of forestry of the department of agriculture of the United States had in its charge at the close of the last fiscal year over eighty-five million acres of forest reserve. Of even greater importance than the preservation of such natural forests as remain is the work of the bureau in advising owners of forest land as to the best way of working the forests. Over ten million acres of forest land has been submitted by the owners to the government bureau for directions as to the best management with a view to perpetuating the forest.

The voluntary placing of forest land under the care of the government would seem to show that there will be a place for foresters when men are turned out by schools of forestry. The United States is the only civilized country where forestry is not a recognized profession followed by a large number of educated men. Yet it ought to be one of the most important professions in the country. About 36½ per cent of the country is forest—over one million square miles. The lumber industry in 1900 ranked fourth among the industries of the United States, producing over 35 billion feet of lumber, valued at $566,832,984. The average annual loss by forest fire is estimated at $20,000,000. The loss by unintelligent cutting cannot be estimated.

In Europe in almost every state not only public forests but private forests are under the control of the state. In France, for instance, a forest is divided into five sections, and during periods of thirty years each only one of the five sections can be cut, thus allowing each section 120 years of rest and recovery. In Germany there are many excellent schools of forestry, and Prussia alone, with a forest area one-thirty-fifth that of the United States, employs more than ten times as many men as the United States bureau of forestry, besides those in the employ of the great land owners.

The effect of the forests upon climate, especially in the matter of rainfall, has long been recognized. Every state except Delaware has an annual Arbor day to encourage the planting of trees. Scientific advice is needed in order to utilize the widely diffused interest in the preservation of forests, and the lumbermen, whose own prosperity is bound up with the perpetuity of their sources of supply, do well to encourage the study of forestry.

SHANGHAIING

The fear that one of the most prolific sources of inspiration of minor novelists might be cut off by the passage of a bill introduced into congress by Mr. Morell of Pennsylvania is removed by the comment of the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries. The law is intended to prevent shanghaiing, or kidnaping, men and compelling them to work on the sea. The bill has received favorable action from the committee, but the committee has little hope that it will be possible to make out a case in more than one-fifth of the instances of violation of the law.

The oyster trade is responsible for most of the indignities of this kind and has been kept principally in mind in drafting the law, but the practice is not confined to that class of vessels. The agents who supply the oyster boats with men receive $10 or $12 for each man put aboard, the money being deducted later from the wages of the men. Some are merely deceived as to the nature of the work and the compensation for it, but a large number are brought aboard without their knowledge. These latter are, of course, drugged, stunned, or drunk at the time. They have not proper clothes with them for the work and the exposure to weather which is inevitable. Their physical powers are not equal to what is demanded of them, and the loss of time and money is, perhaps, the least serious phase of the situation. In many cases it must practically amount to murder when a man is shipped off to the oyster beds.

The novelist has evolved many startling situations and many amusing ones out of the practice of shanghaiing. It rarely was amusing in real life. Of the surviving forms of slavery it was one of the most disagreeable. The fact that in many cases the victim had placed himself in the way of it by too great indulgence in liquor was no consolation to him. If he escaped with his life he was lucky. But one may imagine that oysters would lose their power to please a man who had been compelled to spend weeks on a scow floating about the oyster beds and doing the hardest and least requited work of his life. The old abuses die hard. It is strange that the practice has been allowed to continue so long, but it is high time it was ended.

THE TOBACCO TRUST.

The Supreme court of Massachusetts has hit the tobacco trust a body blow. It has declared constitutional and not in conflict with any federal statutes a statute passed by the legislature of Massachusetts "for the protection of traders." Under this statute, in brief, no person, firm, corporation, or association of persons doing business within the state may make a condition of sales that the purchaser shall not handle the goods of other dealers. If a retailer can buy one article to advantage from one manufacturer or distributer and another to advantage elsewhere he cannot be refused the privilege.

In the particular case before the court it was proved that the Continental Tobacco company offered a rebate of 6 per cent on plug tobacco to the retail dealers who agreed to handle no other make of tobacco than that of the company referred to. It was proved that the conditions of the trade were such that this 6 per cent rebate made a vital difference to dealers; that in 1904 95 per cent of the plug tobacco and 80 per cent of the cut plug tobacco in Massachusetts were handled by the company, commonly known as the trust; that the 210 jobbers of tobacco in Massachusetts could not afford to buy of any one but the "trust," and that a practical monopoly was created which might reasonably be expected to result in increased prices to the consumer.

The court remarks: "Tobacco is not one of the necessaries of life, but its use is so common that to many persons it seems almost as necessary as food. The poor, much more than the rich, would be likely to be affected by the monopoly of the market for plug tobacco and a rise in the price which might be expected to follow it." The court is of the opinion that "this statute was enacted in the interest of the public health and the public safety, if not of the public morals." The poor man's right to get his plug of tobacco at competitive prices is thus maintained, and the little transaction is dignified by casting over it the halo of the name of the public health and the public safety. However tardy justice may be in ending other wrongs, no greedy corporation shall be allowed to raise the price of plug tobacco in Massachusetts without cause for speedy repentance.

The law as thus declared by the Supreme court of Massachusetts will apply to all attempts at monopoly, whether exerted through refusals to sell without exclusive contracts or through special rebates. It is a salutary law, demanded by the special conditions of the business world today, and yet founded upon sound legal principles. Illinois needs the enforcement of such a law.

ANSON'S ABSENTEES.

There was a moment, some years ago, when the country was ready to be stampeded into making Admiral Dewey president. Time brought second thought and the thing didn't happen. A year ago Chicago voters, to show their appreciation of a popular baseball manager, elected "Captain" Anson to the office of city clerk. That he possesses the qualifications requisite for that office no one has ever seriously contended. His record has conspicuously contradicted any idea that he knows much or cares seriously about its duties.

When the deputy clerk was indicted a year or more ago for changing the record of the council proceedings, and the indictment was quashed on a technicality, the city clerk felt so little interest in or responsibility for the functions of his office that he refused to sign the charges requisite to cause his deputy's behavior to be investigated by the civil service commission. A private citizen was therefore compelled to sign the charges, and rather than face them the deputy resigned.

It now appears that three employés in the city clerk's office have been absent eighteen, thirty-nine, and fifty days respectively during the last four months, and yet have received full pay for the time. City Clerk Anson did not himself bring this fact to official or public attention. The city auditor made the fact public, and the civil service commission has taken it up for consideration. City Clerk Anson is not doing anything to remedy these conditions in his office now that another department has brought them to general notice. He is not ready when specifically confronted with this state of affairs to take remedial or disciplinary action.

The civil service commission summoned the city clerk to a conference on the subject of his absentee clerks on Friday and asked him to sign charges which the commission had prepared against them. He refused to do so, and it will remain for some private citizen again to take the responsibility of maintaining some sort of order in the office which "Captain" A. C. Anson is paid $5,000 per year to manage.

It is confidently assumed that the civil service commission will see that these cases are properly dealt with. In the meantime the democratic voters may raise the question as to whether the ex-baseball captain is, as city clerk, displaying the particular brand of backbone and executive capacity which should characterize a candidate, say, for sheriff. When an elective official's eagerness for some other elective office is of the sort which makes him a coward in his present office that cowardice is not a good qualification for another job.

The stories which Capt. Anson told on the platform during his campaign a year ago seemed then to win him votes, but the people may not be so "easy" a second time. They may turn the light on the captain's record. While the captain is in his present office he should try to be a real city clerk.

THE DIVISION OF CALIFORNIA.

The outbreak of the civil war gave to the people of the western part of Virginia the opportunity which had long been coveted to break away from those of the tidewater region, who were different in origin and characteristics. In a certain way the matter of freedom or slavery was incidental to a long standing controversy, serving rather as occasion than as cause of the division of the "Old Dominion." The doubtful constitutionality of the act of division leads most students to fall back upon war powers as the easiest way to uphold the organization of the state. With the exception of this instance and the earlier one when Massachusetts permitted the admission of Maine as a separate state, there has been no case of the division of a commonwealth, although provision for such a thing is made in the constitution.

The increasing heat of the slavery controversy was marked by several suggestions in this direction, a notable one being the arrangement for the division of Texas into five states if desired. Another factor in the compromise of 1850 is recalled by the story which comes from California of the revival of talk about a division of the golden state into two parts, with Los Angeles as the leading city of the southern commonwealth. For, although California was admitted to the union under its free state constitution, which had been adopted under peculiar circumstances, such concession was not intended by the southern politicians as a final settlement in case, after further study, it should be shown possible to maintain slavery in the parts of the state south of the Missouri compromise line. One prominent leader of the time declared that there should be six states on the Pacific frontage of the present California, these giving more relative power to the coast region. He painted a picture of the future which would see twenty states on the west side of the Rocky mountains, and said that congress would never consider giving to California its great extent of territory if it was expected that, in all time to come, there would be but one state on the west coast with an ocean frontage as great as that of the combined New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, the two Carolinas, and Georgia on the east. When population came he felt sure that division would be inevitable.

The downfall of the slave power put an end to the propositions for more states to insure the retention of southern control of the United States senate, and, as state pride has developed, it seems quite unlikely that there will come a time when California or any other state of the union will be divided. It is characteristic of human nature, however, to find the citizens of Los Angeles disposed to make some capital out of the misfortunes of San Francisco. A few weeks ago the dominant note everywhere was sympathy. Now that that has lost its supreme potency it may be expected that the doubts of the wisdom of rebuilding a city over an earthquake center, with the natural depression of all interests connected with the ruined metropolis, will be followed by other suggestions, such as the division scheme, but, at the same time, there is little reason for supposing that the future will show anything else than a renewed and glorified San Francisco, the crowning pride of a great and undivided commonwealth.

It should not escape the attention of the police that the youthful anarchists of the city are expecting to make their usual riotous demonstration with deadly explosives on or about the fourth of next July.

There is great excitement in south side suburban circles over a rumor that work will be resumed this morning on the Englewood extension of the Alley "L."

Absolute Truth.

[From Harper's Weekly.]

"The recent discussion started by the action of the Brooklyn public library in questioning the advisability of allowing children under 15 to read of the pranks of Mark Twain's immortal boys, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn," said a literary critic, recently, "reminds one of the story of the careful lady about to purchase a book for her son.

"'Show me some books suitable for a child, please,' she said to the clerk. 'No fiction, but absolute truth, and without absurdly fanciful pictures.'

"'Well, madam——' The bookseller paused, his eye running over his shelves; then, with a flash of inspiration, he took down a volume. 'I should think this might meet your requirements,' he said.

"And he handed her Wentworth's Geometry."

Discouraging Man.

"What do you want with an automobile?" asked the discouraging man.

"I want to get out in the country and hear the song of the birds and smell the perfume of the flowers."

"O, that's it! Well, what you'll hear is the honk of the chauffeur's horn and what you'll smell is gasoline."—Washington Star.

LETTER OF MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Copyright: 1906: By the Marquise de Fontenoy.

EVER since President Roosevelt suggested the meeting of another peace congress similar to the one held at The Hague in 1899, papal diplomacy has been actively engaged in endeavoring to have the conference assemble either at Brussels, Madrid, or Lisbon—anywhere, in fact, rather than in the Dutch capital. The reason for this is that when the last conference took place at The Hague and the Italian government demanded and secured the exclusion of any representative of Leo XIII. the latter became so angry that he withdrew his resident envoy from The Hague and broke off all diplomatic relations with the Netherlands. These have not been resumed, and the attempts made from Rome to bring about their restoration have been discouraged by the Dutch government.

Since then, with the advent to the pontifical throne of Pius X., the relations between the papacy and the quirinal have undergone so marked an improvement that it is doubtful whether the Italian government would offer any opposition to the representation of the holy father at the next peace congress. But, of course, the fact of the latter being held at The Hague is in itself sufficient to prevent the papacy taking part therein. For the delegates to the congress will be, to all intents and purposes, the guests of Queen Wilhelmina, and it is manifestly out of the question for her to consent to receive on the same footing as the other delegates those of a court which has gone out of its way to break off diplomatic relations with her government.

From Paris comes the news of the marriage the other day of the young duke of Audiffret Pasquier, just 24 years of age, to Mlle. de Saint Genys. He succeeded to the dukedom just a year ago through the death of his grandfather, having lost his father, the marquis d'Audiffret Pasquier, some months previously through an automobile accident. The dukedom is of relatively modern creation. But the family of Audiffret is an ancient one. It is of Italian origin, and settled in the Basses Alps in the thirteenth century.

The father of the late duke bore the title of comte d'Audiffret, held the lucrative post of receiver general of taxes, and married the daughter of Stephen Augustin Pasquier, director general of the state tobacco monopoly, and younger brother of that Stephen Denis Pasquier who was prefect of police during the reign of the first Napoleon, minister of state under King Louis XVIII. and Charles X., and chancellor of the kingdom of France when Louis Philippe was on the throne. The first Napoleon had given him a barony; Louis XVIII. made him a peer of France; King Charles advanced him to the rank of count; while Louis Philippe transformed him into Duc Pasquier. He died in 1863, and in accordance with the terms of the patent of his dukedom the latter passed to his grandnephew and adopted son, Count Gaston d'Audiffret, who assumed the title of duc d'Audiffret Pasquier.

I should add that, although the Pasquiers received a barony from the first Napoleon, they had been ennobled by the kings of France as far back as the seventeenth century, when one of their number, Stephen Pasquier, was auditor general of the realm.

The late duke was a learned man, a member of the academy, and during the first three years of the present republic played quite an important political rôle, presiding in turn in the chamber of deputies and the senate. Although he owed his dukedom to the house of Orleans, yet he never managed to get along with the Orleans pretenders, and his relations with the present duke of Orleans were still more strained than they had been with the comte de Paris. The latter was often in the habit of sneering at the old duke, and of ridiculing him for what he was pleased to describe as his narrowness of mind and for his avarice, that is, his refusal to contribute largely to the Orleanist cause. On the other hand, the duke was equally open in expressing his dissatisfaction with the late comte de Paris and with the present pretender, declaring that he preferred on the whole a republican form of government to monarchy in the person of such men. He was more dreaded than popular in the great world of Paris on account of the bitterness of his tongue and of his phlegm.

Baron von dem Bussche, the counselor of the German embassy, who is still detained at Washington by the illness of his wife, will leave as soon as she is sufficiently recovered to travel, and proceed to Berlin, in order to take up his duties at the department of foreign affairs, left vacant by the resignation of old Baron Holstein. The position is that of counselor intrusted with the direction of the political and personal bureau, without exception the most important of all the offices of the department. It is the bureau which, subject to the subsequent approval of the chancellor and of the kaiser, suggests and elaborates foreign policies and which keeps track of them, and it is the bureau which likewise selects, also subject to the approval of the kaiser and of the chancellor, the ambassadors, the ministers, and the agents intrusted with the execution of the policy. It was the possession of this post which rendered Baron Holstein the most powerful and influential of permanent officials in the service of Germany, and there is no doubt that Baron Bussche will, so far as ability is concerned, live up to the traditions of his much feared predecessor.

From an American point of view it must be particularly agreeable to feel that a man so warmly attached to this country as Baron Bussche, who has so many warm friends here, and who is possessed of so much knowledge and enthusiasm regarding everything American, should be destined henceforth to have so important a voice in the shaping of the foreign policy of the Teuton empire. It may be added that both Baron Sternburg and Baron Bussche are personal appointees of the emperor for their respective posts, that is to say, he selected them on the strength of his knowledge of their qualities and characteristics.

It is a great mistake to imagine that Great Britain is the only power which has declined to entertain diplomatic relations with Servia as long as King Peter persists in retaining in his entourage the officers who took part in the shocking murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga. Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands has all along shared the views of King Edward in the matter, and has absolutely refused to enter into any relations with King Peter or with his government. Edward VII., it may be remembered, went so far as to answer by a telegram King Peter's notification of his election as ruler of Servia. But Queen Wilhelmina refused to receive King Peter's message, and caused it to be returned without any acknowledgment whatever.

All the other courts of Europe and the republics of France and of the United States are, however, in diplomatic relations with the king of Servia, and their envoys, when they dine at the palace at Belgrade, have the satisfaction of finding themselves seated cheek by jowl and of rubbing shoulders with the actual murderers who hacked down King Alexander and Queen Draga to death with their sabers.

Prof. Moritz Steinschneider, who is known in Germany as the "Prince of Bibliography," began his ninety-first year last March. The guiding impulse of his life has been to give more than was asked of him.

Cecil Rhodes' tomb in Matoppo hills, South Africa, has been desecrated. An "ad" recently appeared in a Quebec paper as follows: "For sale—A piece of stone from slab covering grave of Cecil Rhodes in the Matoppo hills, southern Rhodesia, South Africa. King Leopold's morganatic queen was formerly Mme. Vaughan. She is said to be an extremely beautiful woman. Originally a barmaid at Bordeaux, she met the king accidentally in Brussels and was privately married in the palace at Laeken not long after. It was for her that he built the beautiful villa at Villifranche, where he spends most of his time.

See "The Prince Chap" at the Grand. It will please you. If it doesn't, see a doctor, for your heart isn't working properly. But if you are in normal condition and are a normal person, then you'll have an evening of pleasure watching the sweetly simple play that Edward Peple has written and Cyril Scott and an excellent company are presenting with delightful completeness.

The story is simplicity itself. A little girl 5 years of age is left in the care of an American artist in London, who is struggling for existence himself. He takes the little one, who is the daughter of a respectable woman who once acted as a model, and who dies begging him to protect the child. He cares for his little charge. We see them together the first night that she is with him. We see them three years later, when an old love comes into his life and passes out of it, and we see them again after ten years have passed, when he is successful and the girl has grown to young womanhood. And we see then the love that heretofore had been that of daughter and father change to the love which brings them together as husband and wife.

The last act stretches the probabilities somewhat and impresses as more or less storybookish, but the dénouement is brought about with the semblance of ease and simplicity and therefore seems more unlikely when recalled than when being watched.

The first two acts are charming. The first one has about it something of the same delicate beauty and poetry that are found in "Peter Pan," for the spirit of childhood is dominant throughout the greater part of it. The mother has come to the studio of the young artist and, after pleading with him to care for the little girl, falls dying on the couch. The curtain is lowered for a moment and soon after it rises again the little Claudia enters and begins her conversation with Peyton.

He is a fine, manly fellow, one devoid of all hint of effeminacy or silliness, but with tenderness and gentleness shining out from every part of him. He takes the child figuratively to his heart the moment he sees her, and only a short time passes before he has her there literally. She asks what has become of her mother, and he tells her how ill the mother was—that she needed a rest, and that she has gone away to a place where she will sleep and be better, and that she is to stay with him. The child is won by the love spirit that welcomes her, and consents to stay. Supper of bread and jam and milk is prepared and eaten, then comes the cleaning up of bedaubed hands and face, the solving of the awful mystery, to the inexperienced masculine of undressing the little one, the telling of a "true story," and then the saying of the evening prayer with its inclusion of the blessing for the mother who is "resting," for the "Daddy" just found, and for the "Princess Alice," whom the "Prince Chap" in the "true story" had loved and left in far away New York.

It is an act simple in material, and simply handled as such material must be in order to impress as natural. The introduction of Runion, who is a dear as faithful English servants go, and Puckers, who is one of the most refreshing specimens of slavey that the stage has seen, only serves to enhance the charm of this appealing first act. It is an act which touched the audience at the Grand last evening, and made certain the success of the play and the performance.

The second act is but little less satisfactory. Claudia has become a little girl of 8 and the time is five days before Christmas and Christmas eve—the curtain being lowered to mark the change of date. The age of "Why" has been reached, and "Daddy" is kept busy answering questions. Certain of them are puzzlers. Santa Claus is an important personage at the moment and queries as to his realness are propounded. A staggerer in the form of a question as to "why, if Santa be a good man, he gives lots of presents to rich children who already have everything and leaves poor children who have nothing with only a few toys" is one of the neat "whys" that have to be answered. There are countless pretty scenes all showing the beautiful relationship that exists between Claudia and her "Daddy," and while they are undramatic, they are none the less instant in their tug at the onlooker's heartstrings. The coming of the "Princess Alice" and the realization by the "Prince Chap" that she has not loved him during the years of separation as he has loved her, bring the note of sadness into the act. And the returning to him of all his letters, which is accomplished just after he and Runion and his artist friends have been playing Santa Claus to Claudia, Puckers, and the other members of the little circle, makes an effectively dramatic ending to the act.

The last act, ten years later, is unduly drawn out, and the bringing together of Claudia and "Daddy" as man and wife is not wholly satisfactory. The "happy ending" probably had to be secured, no matter at what cost, but, could Claudia have been wedded to some worthy young fellow near her own age, the attitude of "Daddy" would have been finer and truer. But the author has not seen it thus, and so the story book ending must be accepted. It does not actually spoil the play, and the majority of the theatergoers will find it wholly correct.

The performance is admirable throughout. Mr. Scott, in the rôle of Peyton, has all the virility and manly bigness that the part requires to avoid becoming effeminate and unduly sentimental, and he has also the ability to express tenderness and abundant affection which is indispensable to the part. He exhibits the buoyancy and vigor that belong to a young fellow who is happy hearted, healthy bodied, and correspondingly confident and optimistic, and he has in his intercourse with the child all the sincerity, the sunniness, and the semblance of genuine interest without which the winning of a child's confidence is impossible. His playing of all these scenes with Claudia is remarkably natural, and is distinguished by nice discrimination, and his emotional scene at the close of the second act rings true. His performance throughout calls for only the heartiest commendation.

The Runion of Mr. Lamb is a delightful characterization, complete in its every detail, carefully conceived and faultlessly carried out. He is the embodiment of the English servant in all of deference, kindliness, slowness of mental action, and pigheadedness, that distinguish that excellent class. Mr. De Mille plays the "silly ass" rôle of the earl of Huntington in capital fashion, never falling short, and at no time overdoing.

Miss Keogh as Puckers the slavey adds a character study which will be remembered. This slavey is of the noisy, slambang variety, with a tongue which runs like mad, but with a heart that is kindliness itself. The rôle is a grateful one, and it is admirably played. Miss Flavin as "Princess Alice," and Miss Conron as Mrs. Errington do well what little they have to do.

The rôle of Claudia requires three actresses. Helen Pullman as the child of 5 years does remarkably good work. She speaks her lines naturally and with no suggestion of mere parrot like repetition, and her action, too, is free from affectation and staginess. Edith Speare as the Claudia of 8 is similarly satisfactory, although into her performance creeps now and again a hint of self-consciousness. Miss Scott as the grownup Claudia does acceptable work save in the opening scene when the tendency to laugh seems to be too freely indulged. The making of Claudia a little more womanly and dignified would add to the reasonableness of the climax of the act.

A TRIP TO EUROPE IN AN ARM CHAIR

BY CORA ROCHE HOWLAND.

AN essential element in the charm of Paris in the springtime is the abundance of her flowers. The larger flower markets, at the Madeleine, in the Place de la Republique, and on the Quai aux Fleurs, are supplemented by the flower kiosks scattered at intervals along the boulevards, by the big baskets of blossoms which one sees carried on the backs of men and women porters, by the bouquets of flower girls, and the gorgeous window boxes which light up by day the Avenue de l'Opera, the Rue Royale, and the Rue de la Paix. Paquin's windows fairly flame with living color. The maples in the gardens of the city have "put their corals on." The lilacs wave their purple plumes. The acacias are all out in bloom, and the chestnut trees along the Avenue des Champs Elysées have lit their "mimic chandeliers." Flowers are so cheap that anybody can afford to buy them, and almost everybody does.

And when we go into the suburbs of Paris we find the same thing true. In Montmorency, for example, there are marvelous gardens, wide fields of tulips blazing brightly in the sun; daffodils make even shadows glorious; and no sooner are the "azure eyes of heaven," as Heine calls the early violets, closed for their season's sleep than other wild flowers come to take their places in the meadows. The masses of mustard undulating in the breeze are like wide rippling lakes of molten gold. And all the roads that run toward Normandy are hedged by apple blossoms.

Yesterday we sought the country to behold these wonders and to seek the fine old forests we had read about, not Vincennes, however, for on Sunday this lovely woodland belongs peculiarly to the "little people" of Paris; workmen come here with their family parties and practically take possession of the place; and we, as foreigners, have no right to intrude in any way upon their frugal pleasures. Instead we went to St. Germain en Laye and then on to Versailles and home again by rail, reaching the city just in time to see the beautiful lights gleam out along the river and to view the multitude of lamps flash up brightly in the dusk on the Place de la Concorde. There was just enough moisture in the air to make the revolving light on the Eiffel tower look like the arms of a gigantic windmill. The light flashed red, then white, then blue; it was high among the stars, and brighter than any.

But this is beginning at the wrong end of the day with our narration. At early morning we took the steam tramway at the Place de l'Etoile for the hour and a half ride that we contemplated. By the morning light, when the shadows were all full size, the Arc de Triomphe looked bigger than ever above the level surroundings at the base of it. The twelve avenues that radiated from it were shining white. The verdure all about them was green as summer lizards are, and, with the dew upon it, touched by the sun, it was shining like them, too. Slowly we rolled down the Avenue de la Grande Armée to the Port Maillot, where the Avenue de Neuilly was to take us away from the city through the small town of that name.

The pretty châteaux along the route were still asleep. It was Sunday, the day of rest and pleasure. We tried to imagine how the place must have looked when Louis Philippe owned it and used it as the park for his château. We crossed the glittering Seine, that, touched on every ripple edge with sunlight, was spangled as a dancer's silvery robe. This bridge of Neuilly, which took us across the river, has its story like every other bridge and corner of the landscape of this whole countryside. Twice rebuilt, it was originally erected by Henry IV., who was impelled to this public work by an accident which happened to him here when, with Marie de Medicis, he was crossing the ferry, which used to run from bank to bank. The place is associated also with the history of Paschal, for it was here that he was nearly drowned by runaway horses, a catastrophe which led to his spiritual awakening and renunciation of the world.

An ascent of the road, and then we turn toward the left, and almost immediately the Arc de Triomphe, two miles and a half away, breaks on our sight. From this distance we get an idea of the majesty of it, a thing impossible when close at hand, because it is so out of proportion to everything around. The town of Courbevoie, where we gain the view, deserves a passing notice, for it is fairly typical of the towns along the Seine in the neighborhood of Paris. There are laundries all along the river. Perhaps there is a greater percentage of large buildings among the smaller houses than is common. The long low structure near the station is a barrack which Louix XV. constructed for his Swiss guards.

In the rondel, near the railway, as we spin along, is the monument of the Defense of Paris, and then we come to Puteaux, a homely little village given up to manufactories. As we cross the plain to the north of fortified Valérien the freshness of the morning breaks over us anew. For the fields are thick with flowers, and fairy gossamer is spread across the grass to dry. Sitting on the top of the tramway, at its front, and rushing along through the air, we felt that the beautiful world which we see is peculiarly ours, ours to have for the loving of it, ours because of our capacity to enjoy the beauty that it offers.

Afterward came Nanterre of St. Genevieve's miraculous well, the birthplace likewise of the saint. Ruell was next, where Richelieu lived in summer, then Malmaison, sad and lonely, overcast with memories of the sorrows of Josephine, and of Napoleon's tragedy as well, for thence the Corsican went to St. Helena, having come to Malmaison to take farewell of his family. It is not the same place that it was in the old days; the commonplaces of civilization have encroached upon the eloquent sweep of its original precincts, and of its old grandeur only enough remains to add to the melancholy of its history. The château is a museum; and of the former grounds only the Cour d'Honneur, the garden of Bonaparte, the stream, and a remnant of the lawns remain.

Proceeding on our way we beheld on our right, spreading out impressively, a lovely forest; there also stood a château wherein Louis Bonaparte once lived. We came into a grove of chestnuts that, protected by each other, were still blooming. How beautiful they were—like small white lanterns swinging gently with the breeze that we stirred up in passing by. Here lay a little village on the river's bank with boats around it in the water. We traversed a town, skirted a farm, a reservoir, and then we left the Seine to climb the heights of St. Germain en Laye. Taking a long, deep breath, we tried to imagine how it must have felt to be a king of France, for St. Germain en Laye was their favorite resort in summer time. And then, prosaically, we put on the little toe rubbers that we brought with us in order that walking through the galleries of the old château we should not lose balance on the slippery floors, which are kept waxed to the highest degree of polish.

We took a cab to the Place du Château and drove through the little town, which has an interesting old church in it and a town hall, and then we entered the beautiful terrace which we had come especially to see. For a mile and a half we drove between the river and the woods. On this side the forest rose magnificently, a natural monarch of the country prostrate at its feet. Beneath it and the terrace the landscape, low lying, looks humble enough, all except the river, which winds restlessly toward the larger, freer sea. Just below the terrace is a little town, Le Pecq, and beyond it Le Vesinet, and further yet is Montmorency. In the park of the middle distance there are red tiles of roofs, and the whiteness of heavy shutters, and pinks and browns and yellows of the houses. Montmartre is visible far in the distance, and way off to the right the Eiffel tower pierces the horizon line. Mont Valérien looms up between the two, shutting off from view the rest of Paris.

Of all the forests of France, no other excels in natural beauty the forest of St. Germain en Laye. It has a wide street running through it, but for the most part it is uncut, unchanged, and best of all, there are few people in it, if you reach it early enough in the day, before the steamer comes up the river from Paris; this is easily possible to do, since the boat does not leave the Pont Royale until half after 10 in the morning, and the trip by water takes a good three hours and a half.

How stupid Versailles looked after the natural beauties of St. Germain en Laye. Dull houses in a deadly town, a heavy palace, and a garden most solemn through the evidences of its frivolity. The show places of Versailles oppress one by their artificiality. Horrible to find geography, geometry, astronomy worked out laboriously in hedges, to see trees distorted out of all their beauty in a degenerate effort at a new effect of opulent magnificence, and all of it glaring in the noonday sun. This is the impression which Versailles made upon us first, until we visited the palace and lost ourselves in imaging mentally all the splendor of its long ago, the formal ceremony of the reigns of Louis XIV. and XV., the courts of Maintenon and Dubarry, of Marie Antoinette and her frivolous ladies, who knew no better than to dance and sing and play at living while the people starved. Then the curiously elaborate surroundings seem more reasonable, more in keeping. And when you enter into the deep recesses of the wood and hear the nightingale singing—the nightingale which they say sings not of sadness but of joy in a newborn consciousness of love—where you find a statue hidden in a dell, or a silent fountain which, could it speak, could tell such interesting stories of the past, then you realize it's May time, play time, that old Versailles is quaint and lovable, that you are glad you came. You are able to forget the horrors of that terrible siege of it by the women of the "Halles."

Today we are going to take another jaunt away from Paris, a harder one, I fear, than this of yesterday, but no less satisfactory, considered in retrospect. Before we are scarcely awake we are driving hurriedly from our hotel to the Gare de Lyon. We reach there just in time to buy our tickets and get into the proper compartment of an express train on the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean railway. The train makes no stop till we reach Melun, having crossed the Marne where it joins the Seine, just outside Paris, with the forest of Vincennes to the north, and the plain of Ivry to the south.

This portion of the valley of the Seine is as beautiful as that portion which we saw yesterday. The whole prospect is gently pleasing, the bright, green fields, the ancient churches, the humble houses, the long white roads shaded with Lombardy poplars, or the silver leafed poplar closely clipped, and the glimpse now and then of the river with perhaps a country house upon the hill beyond. Melun is twenty-eight miles from Paris. Cæsar tells how his lieutenant, Titus Labienus, took the town. Four miles farther, at Bois le Roi, we enter the forest of Fontainebleau, over which the wild huntsman used to ride, just as over the forests near Heidelberg. At thirty-seven miles from Paris we reach the station, surrender our tickets at the platform gate, and take an omnibus for the palace. It is a drive of a mile and a quarter through a dreary town. There are two officers in the omnibus; one in blue, with a decoration on his breast, the other in red.

Before entering the palace we lunch in the garden, in pleasant shade, with statues and fountains about. The palace is not beautiful on the exterior, and is apparently considerably dilapidated. We enter the Court of Farewells, where Napoleon took leave of his old guard when departing for Elba, and where he reviewed the same troops the next year before Waterloo. The first room which we visit is the chapel where Napoleon III. was christened. Most interesting among the other rooms are those occupied by Marie Antoinette and those of Napoleon. The most imposing is the ballroom of Henry IV. In the library is a portrait of the same king, wearing the white plume which blazed amidst the thickest carnage at Ivry.

The long series of apartments would seem interminable had we not seen Versailles; there they are merely devoted to the uses of the art gallery, but here they contain the same hangings and furniture that Louis XIV. and others once used. That great restorer, Louis Philippe, who saved the palace of Versailles from utter desolation and made it the treasure house of art that it now is, also judiciously restored Fontainebleau. Francis I., Henry IV., Louis XIV., and Louis Philippe were the great builders among the kings, and Napoleon III. did more than all the rest together.

NEW YORK DOWNED IN FIRST GAME.

Chicago Nationals Whale the Champions, 10 to 4, Before Huge Mob.

THOUSANDS WAIT OUTSIDE

Locals Overcome Lead of Three Runs with Fine Streak of Batting.

The greatest crowd that ever saw a baseball game in Chicago pushed and fought itself into the west side park yesterday before the gates were locked at 2:30 p. m., and yelled itself black in the face over the humiliation of New York's world's champions at the hands of Chicago's Nationals by a score of 10 to 4 in their first clash of the season.

The attendance beat by 4,000 that for any previous game on the grounds, according to President Murphy's statement. Probably 25,000 persons, estimated on a most conservative basis, paid their way into the grounds; another 6,000 or 7,000 would have done so, had they been allowed; and fully 1,500 packed the neighboring roofs as far away as a sight of the grounds could be obtained. Estimated on a polo grounds scale the attendance was easily 40,000 with as many more trying to get in.

Two Thousand Wait Outside.

Fully 2,000 disappointed fans remained on the outside, staring at the barred gates and bare fences throughout the game, learning what happened inside from kind persons on the top rows of the stands, who yelled down the more important plays and the scores. At that the outsiders saw as much of the game as some of those who got into the grounds.

The mob which stormed the ticket sellers when the gates were opened at noon quickly filled the big stands and began overflowing on to the field an hour and a half before the advertised starting time. By 2 o'clock every inch of space from which a peep at the field could be had was jammed, with the exception of the reserved boxes. Still the crowd poured through the numerous gates, the late comers pushing in behind the great circle which surrounded the playing field.

Sale of Tickets Stopped.

At 2:30 the crush on the grounds became so great that the policemen lost control and the fans swarmed over the field. Immediately orders were given to admit only those who already had purchased tickets. It was none too soon, for the game could not have been played if many more had been admitted. As it was, it required an additional detail of police, rushed to the park in patrol wagons, to clear the field, and an hour's time to do it, so that the game was half an hour late in starting. The playing surface was so contracted then that a hit into the crowd went for only two bases instead of three, as usual there.

The game itself was just made for a big crowd. It was full of hits by the home fellows and bungles by the hated enemy. It was an uphill battle, too, in which Chance's men had to hammer Leon Ames hard and often to overcome a lead of three runs which Lundgren's one bad inning gave the Giants in the third. But they did it with a long margin to spare, and joy knew no bounds.

Visitors Get Good Lead.

New York's rally came early. After Ames had struck out in the third, Bresnahan and Browne singled, McGann rapped a double into the crowd, and Mertes singled, sending the three Giants before Carl could stop them. The world beaters then walked out to their places with an air which said plainly "I guess that'll hold you for a while."

But it didn't. In their half the Spuds got busy with Mr. Ames. Slagle, Sheckard, and Schulte lined out two baggers, cutting New York's lead down to one run. That was [illegible] out and buried deep in the fifth with a [illegible] of five hits for five runs. Sheckard [illegible] the sortie with a single. Schulte sacrificed, and Chance and Steinfeldt singled, tying the knot. Tinker rapped one to Ames, who had Chance 'way off third base, but [illegible] the ball, while the manager edged back until a hurried throw and a muff by Devlin let him return to third in safety.

Giants Yelp Like Coyotes.

[illegible] bags were full and one out. Evers [illegible], working the "squeeze" with Chance perfectly. Bowerman grabbed the bunt and [illegible] a hopeless attempt to catch Chance instead of making sure of Evers at first. The Giants were in the air a mile, and yelping at each other and at the umpires like coyotes. Kling singled, scoring Steinfeldt and Tinker. Lundgren fanned, and Slagle [illegible] a double into the crowd, sending Kling home. Scheckard flied, and the Spuds were four runs to the good.

Chicago added another with two singles and a pair of errors in the sixth, and two in the eighth on a pass and two doubles. After the third Lundgren was a stone wall, and the Giants butted against it desperately but futilely until the ninth, when a stray Giant was allowed to come in. Score:

SOX IN GOTHAM FEELING CHIPPER

"Other Fellows Will Have to Hustle from Now On," Says Jones.

BOSTON WANTS PLAYER.

Manager Collins Is Said to Be Dickering for Catcher McFarland.

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—Fresh from their victorious series in Washington, the Chicago White Stockings reached here this afternoon, ready to engage Griffith's ball players in a series of three battles.

Comiskey's club looks good right now and is playing as good or better ball than any other club in the league, barring the champion Athletics.

"We are playing as good ball as we ever did in our career," said Manager Jones upon his arrival at the Fifth Avenue hotel this afternoon, "and it will take some hustling on the part of the other clubs to keep us from being a hot contender for the flag."

Sullivan, reported sick in Washington yesterday, was practically all right today and probably will be seen behind the bat in tomorrow's game on Washington Heights.

Doc White, who joined the team in Washington, is billed to work in the opener for Chicago.

Manager Collins of the Boston club was at the Fifth Avenue hotel when the White Sox arrived and was soon busy in conference with the Chicago manager. Collins is scouring the country for material with which to brace up his club. He is reported to be after Eddie McFarland.

President B. B. Johnson and Vice President C. W. Somers of Cleveland are in the city also.

Criger to Undergo Treatment.

Boston, Mass., May 20.—[Special.]—Determined to go the limit in its efforts to strengthen the team, the management of the Boston Americans today telegraphed Lou Criger to come at once to undergo treatment here at the hands of Dr. Andrew F. Christian, an expert on nervous troubles. Criger is now at Elkhart, Ind., and as soon as possible will come here.

HERMAN BACK FROM THE COAST.

Chicago Fighter Expects to Go East Next Week and Get New York Match.

Kid Herman returned from California yesterday and after a week of boxing exhibitions at a local theater will go on to New York, where he expects to get a match at Madison Square garden. Manager Nate Lewis had an offer some days ago of a match between Herman and the winner of the Britt-McGovern match, if the latter takes place.

Speaking of his match with Attel, Herman says: "I don't like to take the rôle of a kicker, but I certainly got a bad deal. In addition to being entitled to the decision on points registered, I was greatly handicapped, and Attel greatly helped, by the tactics of the referee in the ring. He often bothered me when I was punishing Attel at close quarters and had him in bad condition."

Herman got in at 10:30 and gave an exhibition at the afternoon matinée.

PITCHER IS ALMOST MOBBED BY HIS OWN TEAMMATES.

Players Claim Knolls Is Sulking in Marquettes-Logan Square Game and He Has Narrow Escape.

Oscar Knolls, who belongs to Brooklyn, started pitching for the Marquettes against the Logan Squares at Logan Square park yesterday but narrowly escaped rough treatment at the hands of his own teammates at the end of the first inning.

Knolls, it was claimed, was in a sulking mood, and after Callahan's team had scored ten runs in one inning the Marquette players were so disgusted they almost ran him off the field. Catcher Assmussen went to Knolls' rescue and saved him from being roughly handled. Mears then took Knolls' place and finished the game.

The Logan Squares won by a score of 22 to 10. The contest was a batting feast from start to finish, Callahan, Assmussen, and Reading all getting home runs. "Cal" in five times at the plate secured four hits and a base on balls. The Logan Squares totaled eighteen hits and the Marquettes fourteen. Score:

BANNER TO WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Duplicate Will Be Presented to West Aurora—Berkstresser Regarded as a Wonder.

Urbana, Ill., May 20.—[Special.]—Wendell Phillips and West Aurora High schools, which tied for the state championship in the big interscholastic meet on Saturday, will receive each a championship banner. The University of Illinois managers decided on the possession of the banner already prepared for the victor by lot, and Wendell Phillips won the toss.

The Chicagoans took the trophy away with them today and also the silver loving cup emblematic of victory in the relay race. Another banner will be made at once and presented to West Aurora.

Berkstresser, the Mount Carroll miler, who won in such sensational style on Saturday, is the talk of the university. He is said to have a record of 4:33 at home. Berkstresser will enter the university here next fall, it is stated.

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—Turf enthusiasts will go to Gravesend tomorrow to see the running of the $20,000 Brooklyn handicap, at one mile and a quarter.

Although eighteen horses have been named to go to the post, and the race looks decidedly open, as far as speculation is concerned, the field does not include several of the best thoroughbreds. The incomparable Sysonby, the famous Artful, the $60,000 Hermis, the fleet Oiseau, together with Stalwart, Tanya, Cairngorm, Tradition, and others, all of which were nominated, will not go to the post, much to the regret of the public. Nearly all of these cracks have gone amiss in one way or another and will be pointed for later stake engagements.

For the ones that have been named to sport silk it can be said they are fit and ready. All but Knight Errant have been to races this year, so the public has been able to secure a fairly good line on their exact condition and quality.

The Picket, Delhi, and Proper.

The winners of both the last two Brooklyn handicaps, The Picket and Delhi, are in the list. James R. Keene's Delhi, who has 122 pounds, won the Brooklyn last year, when he shouldered 123 pounds, made all the running, and came home in a drive, beating Ostrich by a length and a half in 2:05⅗. Since then Delhi has not amounted to much, particularly this season. He has run twice and in each instance has been badly beaten.

The Picket carries 120 pounds. For three months the Falsetto horse, which won the Brooklyn two years ago, has been boomed as a sure thing. He has started but once this year—in the same race with Proper at Belmont park. He had 122 pounds and was a hot favorite, yet he ran like a cheap selling plater. Since then Carroll Reid has put the finishing touches on The Picket, which has worked over the handicap distance in better than 2:10.

Proper, too, has 122 pounds to pick up. This big fellow, which was left at the post in last year's Brooklyn, raced in California during the winter, where he ran third to Dr. Leggo and Red Leaf in the $10,000 Burns handicap, at one mile and a quarter, in 2:05¼, carrying the same impost he will pack tomorrow. Then he won the Palace Hotel handicap at nine furlongs over a sloppy track, closing from behind and winning on the post by a neck. On Saturday he worked a mile and a quarter over the Gravesend track in 2:12½, and it was such a breezing gallop for him that the clockers quickly put notches against his name, believing he would prove dangerous. L. Williams, the colored jockey, will have the leg up.

Go Between is in nicely with 108 pounds.

Dandelion Favorite.

Dandelion will go to the post favorite in all probability. He will be ridden by O'Neill and has an impost of 107 pounds. When Grapple beat this son of Hamburg in the Metropolitan handicap by two lengths in 1:39 flat, Dandelion carried 108 pounds to 106 for the Drake horse. It was Dandelion's first race of the year and he performed splendidly, outgoing Oxford, 109, in the run home and beating him a head for place. Five days later Dandelion, taking up eleven pounds, beat Lord of the Vale in handy style, while Miller rode him to perfection.

Merry Lark, who has started only once, and then won the Excelsior handicap at Jamaica with 106 pounds, is considered the probable contender. He will handle 107 pounds, too, and Miller, the regular stable jockey, will ride.

Oxford, 107 pounds, carried this weight in the Toboggan handicap at six furlongs and was badly beaten by Clark Griffith and Tiptoe, but Oxford's performance in the Metropolitan, when he carried two pounds more and was beaten a length and a head by Grapple and Dandelion, is the race to go by. Hildebrand will have the mount.

Tokalon a Possibility.

Tokalon, with 107 pounds, may do something. She has been burdened heavily in her last two races. One of them she won with 120 pounds, but with 126 she finished just outside the money in the other.

D. C. Johnson's Roseben, with 119 pounds, is a doubtful starter.

Garnish, who earned fame last year by defeating Beldame, won a race last month in Jamaica in the mud with 118 pounds. The distance was a mile and a sixteenth, with a lot of platers behind him.

Goldsmith, once the star 2 year old in W. C. Whitney's stable, is nothing but a cheap skate nowadays and has done nothing to warrant his appearance at the post in such a field.

Security, the half brother to Dick Welles and Ort Wells, is the only 3 year old in the lot. He will have ninety-nine pounds to handle. He won the New Rochelle at seven and a half furlongs, with 105 pounds, beating Grapple, Blandy, Inquisitor, Bohemia, and others in 1:33.

Oliver Cromwell ran third to Pretension and Clark Griffith the other day and did well. He will shoulder the lightest weight in the race, ninety-eight pounds.

The weather promise is fair and the track is fast.

The two games played yesterday in the Association Football League of Chicago in the Peel pennant competition materially altered the race. Pullman lost to the Wanderers, its first defeat in the series. Hyde Park blues had a chance to tie Pullman, but, as usual, found the Calumets a hard proposition, the game ending in a draw at three goals each.

In the reserve division the Calumet greens forfeited to the Pullman reserves.

Reinforced by five members of the reserve team, the Wanderers defeated the Pullmans, 3 goals to 2. Pullman was without the services of Shallcross, but was strengthened by Williamson, recently transferred from the Wanderers. Pullman scored in the first twenty minutes, and afterward was on the defensive most of the time. For the Wanderers, Tom Smyth was first to count with a well placed shot. Balster, getting a low pass across from the right wing, shot a second goal. A few minutes later Balster shot straight at Wettengale, who cleared weakly to Tom Smyth, enabling the Irish athlete to score the third goal. The second half witnessed heroic defense by the Wanderers' backs. In several exciting rallies around the goal Pullman counted only once, Dick Smith beating Campbell with a curving shot. Lineup:

Wanderers [3].		Pullman [2].
Campbell	Goal	Wettengale
Dixon	Right back	Sutton

Goals—Smyth [2], Balster, Smith [2]. Time of halves—45 minutes. Referee—J. R. Beaton.

In a rough game, marred by a fist fight between Thompson and McDermott, the Chicago Nationals defeated the Lake Shores at Sixty-ninth street and Ashland avenue, 1 goal to 0, in the Chicago league of association football. Referee J. Ronaldson called in two policemen, who cleared the field and the game proceeded. The goal made by the Nationals came from a penalty kick on a foul by McDermott. Capt. Dockery of the Lake Shores was hurt again and had to leave the field in the second half. Lineup:

Nationals [1].		Lake Shores [0].
Muldoon	Goal	Sullivan

With the score 3 goals to 1 against them up to the middle of the second half the Hyde Park Blues faced a second defeat on their own grounds. Then they took a brace and goals by Morris and McNichols put them even with the Calumets.

The Reds like to win from the Blues, and yesterday they gave the home side a busy time. Winslow counted for the Calumets and Evans for the Blues. Before the interval Pillatt, one of the best goal getters in town, twice counted for the Reds. The game was fast and exciting, the Calumet team showing superior work in the opening half.

Goals—Winslow, Pillatt [2], Morris, McNichols, Evans.

The Metropolitan Rangers and Thistles, who played ahead of the Nationals and Lake Shores at the Mets' grounds, played a tie game, each team getting one goal. The high wind bothered the men, and, although the game was close, it lacked combination work. E. Buchanan scored for the Rangers after fifteen minutes of play on a pass from Watt. This was the only score made until within a few minutes of time, when A. Robertson sent a long shot over Light's head.

PAY FOR WHAT YOU GET?

"The rule that works both ways, the just, the sound principle, alike in commerce, in love, and in all other affairs of life, is this: 'Pay for what you get.'"

And we would add pay ONLY for what you get. We hear much these days anent the "simple life." Why not the "simple solution" for the telephone question? "MEASURED SERVICE" is simplicity itself; equitable to both user and company.

Your bread you buy by the loaf; your butter by the pound; clothing by the garment or suit. Why not telephone service BY THE MESSAGE?

A "flat rate" for business use must be an average somewhere between the large and small user.

You neither want to pay part of the other user's bill nor to have him pay part of yours.

HIRSCH GIVES NEW PLANS.

WOULD MAKE SINAI TEMPLE INTO INSTITUTIONAL CHURCH.

Leader of Congregation for Twenty-six Years, Preaching Farewell for the Summer, Advocates Radical Changes—Says the Ambition of His Life Is to Create Center of Religious and Industrial Life, Where Handicraft Should Be Taught to All.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, delivering his last address for the summer yesterday in Sinai temple, outlined plans for a radical departure in the work of the congregation. His fondest desire, he said, is to see the temple as a material structure and as an institution supplanted by a new religio-industrial center.

The address closed Dr. Hirsch's twenty-sixth year in the pulpit. He will go to Europe next week to be gone four months. His appeal, made at the close of his sermon and almost in the same breath with which he asked the blessings of God on the congregation during his absence, created a great impression.

"The ambition of my life is to see this fortress of stone replaced by a fortress of life—a center of growing life for the development of humanity, where rich and poor, learned and unlearned, can gather in common and feel at home," said Dr. Hirsch; "to depart from the temple idea and create an auditorium, surrounded by workshops and gymnasiums, and to unite the religious, social, and industrial features of life."

In his sermon he appealed for a creative morality to meet the conditions of the times. One condition that is awaiting reform through this morality, he said, is the accumulation of wealth by the few.

"Under present conditions a few become the beneficiaries of the many," he said. "Less so-called charity and more justice is my solution of the modern day problems. The rich man justly is only the administrator of his wealth. He does not own it. He should administer it to the good of those who made it."

OLD SWEETHEARTS WED HERE AFTER CIVIL WAR ROMANCE.

Palatine Couple Meet and Arrange Marriage Plans Which Were Stopped When Bridegroom Enlisted in Army.

James Shreve, aged 66, and Mrs. Minnie Kellogg, aged 60, of Palatine, Ill., came to Chicago and were married Saturday afternoon. The ceremony was the culmination of a courtship which had its origin before the outbreak of the civil war, outlived another marriage by each, and finally was consummated when the former sweethearts met after forty years.

When the civil war broke out Mr. Shreve lived in a western Pennsylvania town. Miss Minnie Nehrer, aged 21, was his sweetheart. When the war broke out they were engaged, but Shreve enlisted and went to the front. The girl, with her parents, removed to Palatine, where all trace of her former sweetheart was lost.

When he returned and was mustered out of the service Mr. Shreve found no trace of Miss Nehrer. He removed to Illinois and was married.

At the last state convention of the G. A. R. Shreve met a comrade from Palatine, who invited him there for a visit. The invitation was accepted and last Wednesday Shreve was introduced to Mrs. Kellogg. Their recognition was mutual. Mrs. Kellogg, now a widow, was instantly recognized as the sweetheart of other days. Preparations for the marriage were made at once.

JUDGE GARY IN MOCK TRIAL.

Venerable Jurist Presides in Pretended Breach of Promise Case Conducted by Junior Bar Association.

A pretty plaintiff, a real judge and court officials heightened the effect at the mock breach of promise trial given by the Chicago Junior Bar association in Steinway hall yesterday afternoon.

Judge Joseph E. Gary presided and the jurors returned a verdict of $5,000 against Robert Inglesby, in real life Joseph H. Landes, 525 West Taylor street, and in favor of the plaintiff, Alice Clarke, who is Miss Anna Harris, 38 Hastings street.

The law students who represented the plaintiff were Barnett Lyon and Samuel J. Andalman. The defendant's counsel were John F. Rosen and Michael Feinberg. Other real court officials who took part in the legal drama were James Pease, sheriff; Gilbert B. Tearney, bailiff; and William J. McKenna, clerk.

Scholle's Good Furniture

New Types in Furniture.

¶The ceaseless demand for new types in furniture, which seems to be a national trait, finds a practical solution in this exclusive furniture store, which is filled with new designs as each new season rolls round. ¶It is an attractive store for furniture lovers. ¶The evolution in furniture designing has evolved a national type which we now style the Colonial, covering nearly two centuries of designs, embracing that of the Dutch Island of Manhattan, the French Louisiana, the English Plantation of Virginia and the Puritan Colonies of Massachusetts Bay, widely different in character of design, and still each has contributed something to the modern type known as the Colonial of to-day. ¶We are strongest in our showing of this Colonial furniture, yet we have not overlooked the designs of other periods so dear to furniture lovers, notably those of the time of the French Louis', survivals of the reigns of those luxury loving monarchs, which are rubbing elbows on our floors with the moderns of sturdier build, among them the Mission types—a cosmopolitan exhibit, all of it, and perhaps all the more enjoyable on that account. The entire store is a treasure house for those who love furniture of the better class. ¶We feel that you will enjoy giving it a leisurely inspection, and let this be your invitation.

LONDON MARKET STILL DULL.

Bank Gold Reserve, However, Is Increasing and Public Confidence Seems to Be Growing.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1906: By the New York Herald.]

LONDON, May 20.—The note of cheerfulness which, as was remarked a week ago, had been struck on the stock exchange, was not of long duration. In certain directions there have been small further advances, but there is practically no business doing. Things have come almost to a standstill. There has been on a moderate scale a certain amount of investment, lists which, in some cases, have been fairly well filled, seemingly showing that public confidence is being restored and that investors are prepared to launch out after such a long period of depression if only the temptation offered be sufficiently strong.

VAST SUM TAKEN FROM NEW YORK.

Deposits of Banks There Show Decrease of $138,000,000 During Last Year.

DUE TO "HIGH FINANCE."

Country Depositaries Withdraw Funds and Loan Their Own Money.

Some explanation of the condition of the New York money market may be found in the figures of the banks themselves, as disclosed in comparative statements of the Clearing House association.

The figures of last Saturday showed that compared with one year ago there has been a decrease in deposits of $138,000,000. The item stood last year at $1,165,151,700. The figures Saturday were $1,026,832,900. Such a shrinkage in deposits has necessarily caused a curtailment in loans, and that item on Saturday showed a contraction of $94,000,000 compared with last year. The clearing house banks compared, even with 1904, show a large loss in deposits, the difference being $74,000,000.

The money that should have grown in volume with the New York banks in the last two years has steadily declined. The country has grown wealthier and prosperity has been unabated. Demands have greatly increased from commercial borrowers, and the money to satisfy such needs is being distributed by western banks themselves.

Reward of High Finance.

High finance as practiced in the conduct of New York insurance companies and the relation of bank officials to insurance institutions have brought their reward to the financial center of the United States in the way of a protest and a withdrawal of confidence. Chicago gained much by this situation until within the last six months, when it had some untoward events of its own, and the banks here are suffering in a milder way, but still in a way. The money which should have come back from the country and found lodgment both in Chicago and New York has remained with country institutions, and they are now large buyers of commercial paper.

Is Slow-Up in Business Near?

While there are few signs of abatement in the general state of prosperity, still there is beginning to be felt here and there that some turn is due. By this it is not meant that business may go to pieces, but that it may slow up and the stock market act in sympathy with the change. It can now be heard that while there is a good demand for steel, the difference between such demand and production is not nearly so wide as it was one year ago. Production is catching up and it is possible for the purchaser to be accommodated in one-half the time that was formerly required.

But there is a saving clause in the steel and iron situation that should be considered; it is the regulation of the business under the policy of the United States Steel corporation. The managers of that great corporation are aware of the beneficence of moderation. They have not advanced prices to a point where consumption has been checked, though they have made and are making good profits. Some years ago, before the steel corporation was organized, the general business of the country came to a standstill because of conditions in the iron and steel market. Prices were put to a point where consumers refused to buy, and in checking so important a branch of activity, other lines of industry were naturally affected.

Possible Crop Failures.

In considering possible crop failures as a market factor, it is believed such failures would not be as far reaching as in years past, for the country is better able to withstand the loss. The latter would come out of the surplus wealth rather than out of necessities. Take for example the Union Pacific.

Years ago its common was selling around $4 a share. The total issue was $61,000,000. The preferred stock issued was $75,000,000, and the bonded debt $95,000,000, and the mileage 4,696.

Now the common stock issue is $164,872,110, the preferred $99,569,134, the bonded indebtedness $229,945,000, and the mileage 5,588. The common stock which sold at $4 now sells at $150, with earnings of 11 per cent.

The Baltimore and Ohio might be cited as another illustration of the degree of prosperity which the country has enjoyed.

Market Position.

The one fact that stands out in the market situation is that stocks are well held, and they presumably will continue to be so held so long as general conditions remain good. The growing surplus wealth of those who hold the bulk of securities requires constant avenues of investment, and there is nothing more satisfactory than these railroad securities so long as the properties show unabated earning power.

The money market has been an uncertain and troublesome factor since last November. One thing and another has operated to make forecast of its probable movements purely speculative. At this time the large speculative Wall street houses are borrowing money freely for six and nine months and paying around 5 per cent. They doubtless will continue to borrow on time, running their loans over into the new year. This borrowing bespeaks a feeling of uncertainty as to what money rates will be later in the year.

In the local stock market the feature was a further weakness in Diamond Match stock. The shares continue to dribble on to the market. There is no news other than a discussion of a reduction in the dividend rate to 8 or 7 per cent. This may be near at hand or far off. The unrest among shareholders grows not out of specific news but the general policy under which the company's affairs are conducted. Strangely enough, those who are managing the property are blind to this fact and seek other and foreign excuses to account for the absence of demand for the shares.

Bank Share Market.

The local bank share market shows some scattered activity, though sentiment with reference to bank shares is not what it could be wished. The causes of this apathy are well enough known. It is hoped in La Salle street that conditions will gradually improve.

Trade in Wholesale Lines.

Trade in wholesale and jobbing circles was generally satisfactory last week, the movement of seasonable merchandise increasing as a result of the more favorable weather. Excepting in lines of trade which are normally quiet at this season of the year, business was reported as all that could be desired. The number of reorders received by jobbing houses compared favorably with previous years at this season, and was augmented by the settlement of practically all the important labor disturbances.

WHEAT IS FIRM ON FEARS.

Dry Weather and Damage Talk Put Prices Higher—Trade Is Broader and More Active.

Reports on weather and crop conditions were the all important influences in the wheat market last week, and the diversity of them gave a mixed complexion to sentiment. They were good, bad, and indifferent, but the ones unfavorable to the growing plant apparently were given major consideration, for prices responded more to them than to those of a more roseate hue. Besides marking increased interest among the professional traders, the week was notable for the better attention shown by outsiders. At times the activity in the market was suggestive of the "good old boom times," and at these times the cry against the inefficacy of the higher commission charges was faint. The closing prices of the week showed advances of 1½@1⅝c for the May, 2¼c for the July, and 1⅝@1¾c over the final quotations of the week before.

Radical bears belittled the unfavorable advices from the west and the southwest to insignificance; radical bulls magnified them to the proportions of vast importance. The fellow who tries to be conservative and rational in the face of fire and thunder moved in sentiment like a pendulum. One day the messages indicating deterioration from dryness, heat, and hot, withering winds would find him present as a buyer; the next day, or perhaps later in the session of the same day, when the advices were of the sort that speaks well for the growing crop, would see him a seller. Conservative pessimists were willing to admit that in all probability dry weather and high, hot winds had not been advantageous to the plant in western Kansas and sections of Missouri, but they did not seem to think that damage already done was irreparable. They laughed at the talk of rust in Texas and Oklahoma, where the harvesting is near at hand, and they saw nothing but a huge joke in the reported devastating raids by chinch bugs and the "grand old army worm." The bulls, on the other hand, felt that the work of damage would be more complete because of the presence of those two destroyers. Within the week several long lines of wheat were built up, and, while some of the more confident bears sold freely on all suggestions of strength, there was a general feeling that caution was the better part of valor, until something of a more definite character was known of the actual conditions in the winter wheat regions. This spirit of caution also was accentuated by the continued tightness of the May situation.

Market Is Oversold.

Bears held that money and muscle were the principal factors in holding up the market, and that when the May is wholly a matter of memory prices will go back "where they belong." That the market had been oversold by the confident bears was apparent, and some of the developments of the week were taken to indicate the distress to which leading shorts were subjected. There were shipments of wheat from the northwest to be applied to May contracts here, entailing material losses, but the offerings, whether they were applied on contracts or turned over to millers, did but little in relieving the tightness of the situation. It is merely a matter of conjecture as to the extent of the northwestern short interests, but some of the bulls who claim to have "inside information" declare that unless private settlements are made they will be wholly at the mercy of their "enemies" here. Some still say that the crowd in the northwest is within between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 bu of having enough wheat to fill contracts.

Weather a Factor in Corn.

Weather conditions also played a prominent part in the corn market. Reported lack of moisture to arouse the newly planted grain to growth had a bullish effect, emphasized, no doubt, by the fact that stocks are at low ebb. The closing prices of the week showed advances of about a cent for the more distant deliveries, with May a shade firmer.

Oats displayed firmness throughout the week, winding up with advances of ⅝c for May, 1⅜c for July, and 2c for September over the last figures of the previous week.

There were several attempts to break the provision market last week, but in the face of them prices displayed firmness.

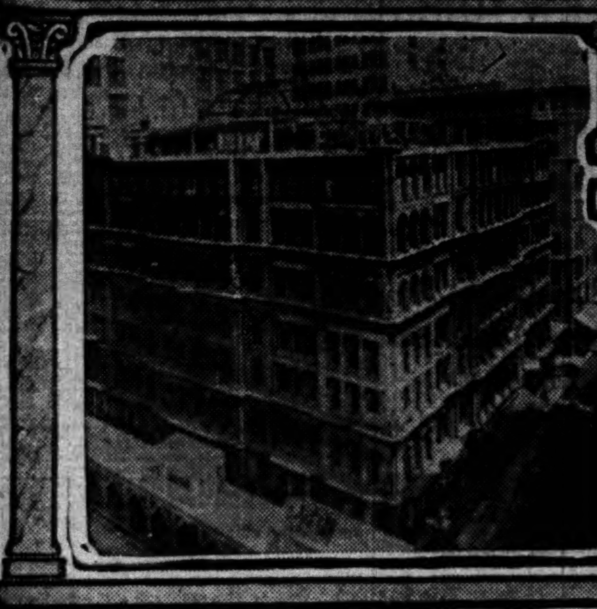
Marshall Field & Company



Much interest is being manifested by the public in this store because of the conspicuous changes of the past few weeks incident to the vacating and demolition of our old building, the occupying of the New Wabash Avenue Building, and the consequent re-arrangement of many of the sections of the store. The entire store is rapidly becoming adjusted to the changed conditions, and business continues practically undisturbed by the stupenduous work which has been going on throughout the store. The work of wrecking the old building is going forward with great rapidity day and night, and is proving of especial interest to the State-st. throngs. A picture is here given showing the condition of the wrecking up to Saturday afternoon. This work is also being done with little or no inconvenience to the public, as the sidewalk protection around the building is commodious and well constructed, and is said by contractors to be the safest and best structure of its kind ever erected. We note with pleasure the disposition on the part of our patrons to overlook any temporary inconvenience these changes may occasion, knowing as they do that this store is being made more than ever a satisfactory supply center and downtown home for the great public.
